

PEERS SECURE SEVEN PLACES IN MINISTRY

Marquis Curzon Retains Post and Will Be Leader in House of Lords.

HOLD INFORMAL MEETING

Action of Reginald McKenna in Lending Support Creates Sensation.

LONDON, Oct. 24. (By the Associated Press.)—Premier Bonar Law tonight issued a list of the principal members of his ministry.

Marquis Curzon retains his post as secretary for foreign affairs and will be leader of the House of Lords.

Viscount Peel retains the Indian secretaryship. Stanley Baldwin, as expected, goes to the exchequer, but it has not yet been announced whether he will be leader in the House of Commons.

The Earl of Derby, at the war office, resumes a post which he has held before. The prime minister had the greatest difficulty with the law offices. It is noticeable that Lord Carson's name does not appear in the new ministry. Viscount Cave becoming lord high commissioner.

The attorney-general, Douglas McG. Hogge, is new to his office; he was formerly closely associated with Lord Carson. His wife is the daughter of Judge Trimble Brown of Nashville, Tennessee, the widow of the Hon. A. J. Marjoribanks.

There are still a number of appointments to be made, and it is believed that five offices held under Premier Lloyd George by Austen Chamberlain, H. A. L. Fisher, T. J. McNamara, Sir Hamar Greenwood and the Earl of Crawford and Balcarres, who all joined Lloyd George in the wilderness, are not yet filled. It is expected that the office of chief secretary for Ireland will be abandoned, and that the ministry of labour will be merged into some other department.

Held Informal Meeting. The prime minister held his first informal cabinet council of the ministers already appointed at a small dinner party at his residence tonight to discuss general lines of policy previous to his visit to Glasgow, when it is believed he will make his political pronouncement.

The election campaign came into full swing today, as light begins to emerge from the confusion into which the sudden collapse of the coalition threw the political world. Two distinct tendencies are becoming apparent. First and most important is the fear of industrial anarchy, and the other parties of the unknown quantity in the labor vote of the electorate.

Labor has been by far the most successful of the various parties in all the by-elections since the elections of 1918; moreover, it is known that the labor party is better organized for elections than on any previous occasion, and that it will have a greater number of candidates in the field than any other party, except the Conservatives.

Hence there is considerable justification for the apprehension entertained. It is quite possible that this apprehension accounts for the second notable tendency, namely the desire of the Conservatives to do everything possible to avoid accentuating the cleavage in their party. There is no doubt that Mr. Bonar Law still hopes for eventual reconciliation with those Conservative leaders who remained faithful to Lloyd George, and the real motive for the wish to heal the split in the party is the hope of countering labor's expected attack on property.

Await McKenna's Move. Perhaps the most notable event of the day has been Reginald McKenna's frank support of the Bonar Law administration. This must be a tremendous disappointment to the Asquithian Liberals, and is at the same time an enormous asset to the new administration. Whether Mr. McKenna will return to active political life in the sense of joining the new administration or becoming identified with the Unionist party is still unknown, and probably depends on the course of future events.

The motive of his new turn, however, is the same as that animating all the other parties, as revealed in the recent speeches of Austen Chamberlain, Winston Churchill, and even in the manifesto of the Asquithian Liberals—fear of socialism and the nationalization of industry. There is manifestly fear of the advent of a labor government, with attacks on capital, and upon private enterprise in trade and industry.

With regard to the question of pro-

tion, Mr. Bonar Law, although he is strongly in favor of tariff reform, is thought to be going "slow out of deference" to the Earl of Derby, whose political strength lies in Lancashire, where the cotton industry is firm against protection.

The Asquithian election manifesto issued today is believed to dispose of any likelihood of a reunion between the opposing sections of the Liberal party. The Lloyd George idea of creating a new centre party seems not to be making much progress.

Mr. Lloyd George has taken a house close to the Asquithian Liberal headquarters in Kensington street, for his political headquarters. The former premier says farewell to Downing street tomorrow, when he is also expected to issue a political manifesto.

The Labor Party has sent a formal request to Premier Bonar Law to have the elections on Saturday, November 18, instead of the previous Wednesday, but up to the present the plan has not been changed. There are already approximately 1,300 candidates in the field for 615 seats, distributed as follows: Conservatives, 450; Laborites, 400; Independent Liberals, 300; Lloyd Georgean Liberals, 170.

Viscount Grey, former secretary of foreign affairs, in a speech at Bradford, devoted himself mainly to the country's foreign policy. He emphasized that the important thing was to get rid of Lloyd George and the Coalition, whose policy abroad had seriously diminished British influence and prestige.

He pleaded for the close co-operation with France and the rescue of foreign policy from the influence of party politics.

LIBERALS' MANIFESTO.

LONDON, Oct. 24. (By the Associated Press.)—The election manifesto of the Independent Liberal party was issued today a meeting presided over by former Premier H. H. Asquith. It declares that the coalition has broken up in general confusion and discord, leaving behind it an unexampled record of extravagance and failure, and asserts that both wings of the coalition are responsible for its misdeeds, and that neither can escape its share of public condemnation.

"Liberalism is not socialism," says the manifesto. "Liberalism repudiates the doctrine of warfare against private enterprise. It stands for: 'First, peace and disarmament, made secure by the League of Nations. 'Second, prompt revision and settlement of reparations and inter-allied debts. 'Third, drastic economy in public expenditure and abandonment of the policy of military adventurism by the community's fulfillment by the community of its responsibility for securing the workers against the hardships of unemployment; co-operation between capital and labor and honest and fair treatment of organized labor. 'Fourth, democratic reform of the existing land system, including taxation and treatment of land values. 'Fifth, unqualified free trade, with the immediate repeal of the safeguarding of industries act and similar protective measures. 'Sixth, maintenance of such essential social services as education, housing and public health. 'Seventh, political and legal equality for men and women. 'Eighth, comprehensive reform of the existing land system, including taxation and treatment of land values. 'Ninth, democratic reform of the licensing system. 'Tenth, readjustment of the electoral system by the introduction of proportional representation. 'The manifesto also declares that no confidence could be placed in the coalition's declaration, whether in the industrial or international sphere. The coalition has shown itself, according to the pronouncement, equally incapable of securing good understanding abroad or pursuing a consistent policy at home. The nation demanded a complete change, conviction instead of compromise, economy instead of extravagance and waste. 'Reminding the electorate that it was Liberalism which denounced the reckless and costly adventures in Russia and Mesopotamia, and fought the battle against protection and government interference in trade, the manifesto says the time has arrived to restore Liberalism to its rightful place in the councils of the nation.

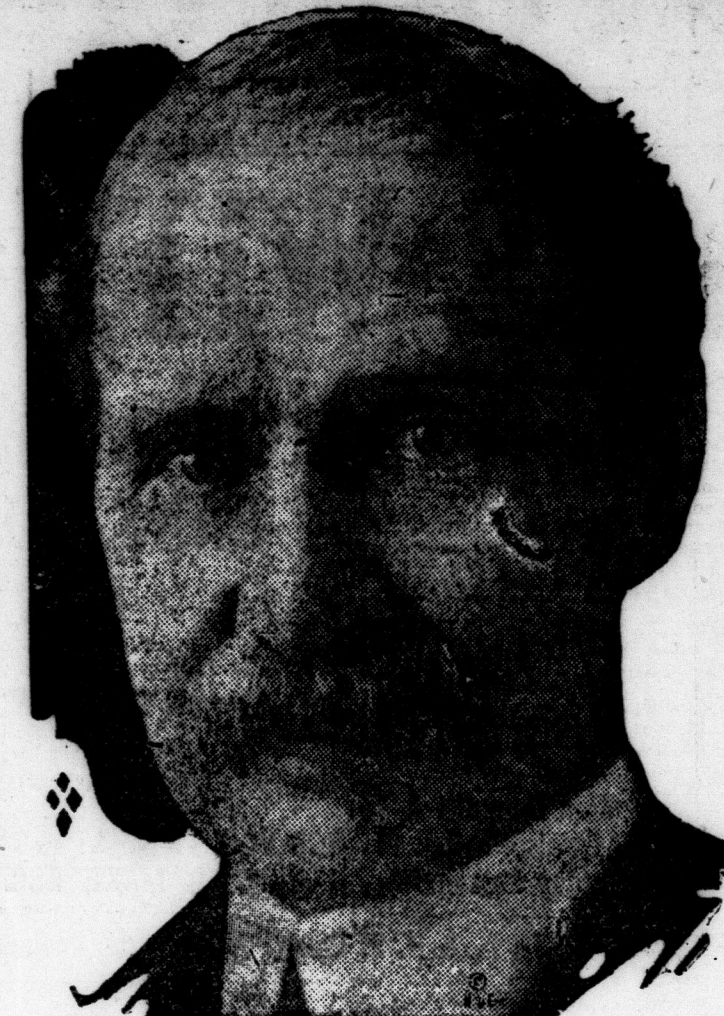

ESCAPES DEATH WHEN TRAIN SMASHES BUGGY

Special to London Advertiser. BLYTH, Oct. 24.—Mr. Liddy of Auburn narrowly escaped being over and killed by the 4 o'clock train on Saturday afternoon at the G. T. R. crossing on Dinsley street. He failed to hear the train whistle and his view was cut off by the grain elevator, so that he did not notice the train till it was fairly upon him. By quick action he averted his horse to the left, swinging the buggy around so that the engine hit the rear, completely demolishing it. The horse had its leg broken and was otherwise injured, but had to be shot on the spot. Fortunately, Mr. Liddy was thrown so that he fell clear of the track, and escaped injury other than a general shaking up.

DAMAGED LOCK TIES UP LARGE GRAIN SHIPMENT

MONTREAL, Oct. 24.—The amount of grain tied up in Lachine Canal as a result of the damage caused to No. 1 lock, which was hit by a lake boat, is increasing at an alarming rate, there being this morning no less than 800,000 bushels, compared with 300,000 yesterday.

Those in charge of the repair work stated last night that the damaged lock would be repaired by this morning, but the work was still uncompleted at noon.

ADVISES BENEFITS OF APPLE-SPRAYING

Ingersoll Shipper Asserts Majority of 1922 Productive Orchards Scientifically Treated.

Special to London Advertiser.

INGERSOLL, Oct. 24.—The efficacy of spraying along scientific lines has stood out boldly in connection with the apple crop in this section of Oxford county this year.

The crop of this district does not compare with the average year, either in quantity or quality, and it has been stated by J. C. Harris, the local assessor, that the majority of the productive orchards have been the ones which were sprayed.

The crop generally has been very small and the quality poor, according to Mr. Harris. Continued wet weather earlier in the season, and the hot spell in September, which caused considerable damage, developing a dry rot. Reference was also made by Mr. Harris to the changed market conditions in Winnipeg and other places in the West. British Columbia apples were formerly shipped in large quantities into the United States. They are now kept out by a high tariff, and are taking the place of the Ontario apples in some of the principal markets of the western provinces.

DRUNKENNESS ALIBI OF KITCHENER MEN

Remand Brothers Charged With Theft and Assault.

Special to London Advertiser.

KITCHENER, Oct. 24.—Andrew and Gregory LaFlamme, Kitchener young men, were remanded until Saturday, on charges of theft and assault, by Magistrate Weir in police court this morning, after evidence was heard in which the court witnesses stated that the pair, after being invited into the home of Fred Riemert, assaulted Riemert and his mother, getting away with $41. Riemert told the court the two young men had come to his door asking to see his brother, who was out at the time. He asked them in and gave them some sweet cider and cake. They asked him to change a $20 bill, but when he produced $41 in bills from which he intended making the change, they refused to produce the $20. Later they assaulted him and his aged mother and left the house, taking the money from a cupboard drawer in which he had placed it following his attempt to make change for them. The defense did not deny stealing the money, but claimed that the boys were so drunk from homebrew received at Riemert's house, that they did not know what they were doing. One of the LaFlamme pair stated that if he took the money he did not know what he was doing at the time. Sergeant Blevins, who arrested the pair about an hour after the fracas at the house, stated they were not drunk when taken into custody. The money was found in a field in which the young men were found by the police.

PIONEER OF WATERLOO COUNTY SUCCEUMS

Special to London Advertiser. KITCHENER, Oct. 24.—David Betzner, one of the oldest native residents of Waterloo County, passed away at his home here today, following a brief illness. Had he lived until Nov. 14 he would have been 89 years of age. He was born in Doon on Nov. 14, 1833, the son of John Bateman, who was perhaps the first white man born in Waterloo County. The father of the deceased was a son of the original Samuel Betzner, the first settler of Waterloo County. Mr. Betzner is survived by two sons, David and Elias of this city.

M'KENNA COMES TO AID OF LAW

Former Chancellor of Exchequer Creates Sensation in Speech.

Predicts New British Administration Will Bring Stability.

LONDON, Oct. 24.—Reginald McKenna, former chancellor of the exchequer, long-known as a staunch Liberal, created a sensation in political circles this afternoon, when addressing the city Conservative Association, he came out in support of Mr. Bonar Law's policy.

"I highly esteem the courage and conviction of Mr. Bonar Law," he said. "It seems to me Mr. Bonar Law's government offers us the only prospect of stability. We shall have not only peace and retrenchment, but capable and faithful administration. 'The policy of the new government is to be one to meet the economic conditions in which we now find ourselves,' he declared. 'It is the only policy which can give us any hope to restore our economic life.'"

At another point in his speech he said: "The name of Stanley Baldwin, as chancellor of the exchequer, will be welcomed in the city. 'With industry in deplorable condition,' continued Mr. McKenna, 'the national expenditure has been maintained on a reckless scale, and is a positive danger to our economic stability. 'We must seek a remedy for the evils which afflict us. We need a period of real peace, of strict economy in administration, and we need the maintenance of cordial international relations.'"

PROVES BIG ASSET. LONDON, Oct. 24.—(Canadian Press Cable.) The speech made by Right Hon. Reginald McKenna, a former Liberal chancellor of the exchequer, to the City Conservative Association here today in support of Bonar Law undoubtedly is a considerable asset to the new premier. Mr. McKenna is almost unknown to the ordinary man, in the sense that he could walk from the Royal Exchange to Charing Cross without ever being recognized, save by his actual acquaintances.

In another sense, though, Mr. McKenna is perfectly known, for, as chairman of the London City and Midland Bank, the most powerful of all the banking groups which now have control of the nation's savings, his opinions carry weight and influence, not merely with the large financier, but with the struggling taxpayer, who is likely to turn the scale in many divisions in the coming elections.

Ever since the break-up of the Asquith coalition government, the feeling between Mr. McKenna and Lloyd George has been strained, the great bank being known to view Sir Robert Horne's appointment as chancellor of the exchequer with particular dislike. Today Mr. McKenna's attitude toward Lloyd George's probable advent to the exchequer with open approval.

Incidentally Mr. McKenna contrived to convey his opinion of the first premier by the quietest of all means. He said: "A fighting spirit may prove of immense value to the nation in war, but there can be little doubt of its unsuitability to the nation in time of peace. Vitalizing and energizing qualities are too rarely possessed by the nation's leaders in administration, and a sober regard for the virtues essential to the rebuilding of social order and prosperity."

Mr. McKenna's remarks concerning labor were noteworthy. Probably every elector of calm vision will agree with him that there is no danger of Bolshevism in England. He took up the statement said to have been made by Right Hon. Arthur Henderson, Labor leader, in the Newport by-election last week, that the Labor party was out for war on private enterprise, and Mr. McKenna declared that a capital levy would be a "wholly impracticable and unproductive method of raising money for state service."

Mr. McKenna added that he had little fear of such happening. In this connection, it must be remembered that when Mr. Henderson spoke in Newport last week there was then no sign of the slightest political upheaval, as has since been experienced in this country, or he could probably have expressed his sentiments differently.

The Evening News, one of Lord Rothermere's papers, says this evening that it believes the balance of power in the new House of Commons will remain in Lloyd George's hands. This expression of opinion is interesting, seeing that such a compliment to Lloyd George would not be forthcoming from such a quarter unless there was a strong belief in its truth.

Greenwood's Future Uncertain. Two to Lloyd George's late ministers are particularly unfortunate in his downfall. Right Hon. Edward Shortt and Sir Hamar Greenwood, Mr. Shortt, the home secretary, announces that he is not seeking reelection. His name, for the last eighteen months at least, has been constantly mentioned in connection with any vacancy on the judicial bench. Now, of course, his appointment to such a position, to put it mildly, is remote. The office of home secretary is at its best a thankless task. Mr. Shortt has had an especially troubled period on several accounts, and now he must go out without any reward.

Sir Hamar Greenwood also suffers a hard fate. Recently it was arranged that his office, as chief secretary for Ireland, should be continued for a limited period, and he might have succeeded Mr. Shortt as home secretary, if the Lloyd George ministry had survived, and Mr. Shortt had got his judgeship. What he will do now is uncertain. Probably he will stand again for Sunderland, but his seat there is considered very unsafe.

Short Skirts, Low Necks, Poker, Made Hubby Seek Divorce.

DETROIT, Oct. 24.—Short skirts, low necks and poker games played by his wife made married life unhappy for Frank Sugden, 6816 Charlevoix, he testified before Judge Adolph F. Marschner Monday. Sugden filed a cross-bill in reply to the action begun by his wife, Mrs. Catherine Sugden, 2761 Louise avenue.

"My wife wore her skirts just to her knees, and the necks of her dresses as low as this," Mr. Sugden declared on the stand, indicating a point near the third button of his vest. "When I told her I thought such dresses were immodest she told me it was none of my business."

Mrs. Sugden used the money her husband gave her for housekeeping expenses to gamble with, according to Mr. Sugden. She also neglected her home and her child, he charged, and threw a bread knife, a cup and a plate at him in the course of a domestic argument.

Both are asking for the custody of their 2-year-old son Palmer.

This was incurred through additional equipment required and extensions to the distributing system, made necessary by the extra load occasioned through the great number of electric stoves connected up. Last month the city had its record bill, $8,900, the consumption amounting to 4,276 horsepower.
