Extractfrom the Lancet, Dec. 22, 1866.

Liq. Carbonis Detergens— We are very sceptical of the value of uew remedies, and it was in a spirit if scepticism that we tried the liq. carbonis detergens. It is represented to be a concentrated alcoholic solution of the constituents of coal tar, and to contain all the active ingredients of the tar, to wit, benzine, naphaline, and phenic acid. The addition of water, with agitation, makes a durable emulsion, in which the tar femains in a state of fine suspension, almost equivalent to solution. Our therapeutical experience of the preparation is very satisfactory indeed. In our hands it has been a most effective agent in the case of various skin diseases, especially of the chronic eczematous class; and one case of psortasis which had resisted all other kinds of treatment speedily got well under the application of the liq. carbonis detergens. We esteem it a very valuable addition to qur list of skin remedies, and worthy of a very extended trial by the profession. In the above classes of disease, and in various others, such as fetid ulcers, etc., the preparation is put into the form of soap.
