And what we can draw is all the more valuable, for the reason that the conditions we have to deal with are so very much like those which prevail over the border. If we but take the trouble to observe carefully what has happened there, we shall be able to ge in advance a very practical understanding of what it will be best for us to do here. From recent official investigations, which continue to be vigorously pushed by President Claveland's government, it appears that at least four million sores of public lands, good and available for settler's homesteads have been illegally seized, in fact without any form or pretence of law at all, and fenced in by cattle companies. But the new government has determined that the barbed wire fence "must go," and to stack sufficient importance to this rorrow, that the president is not oaly in favor of the law but of its enferoement to boot, which indeed makes all the difference in the world, let used.
