To-day We Close at 5.

And every day except Saturday, when we close at ONE until further notice. The summer months are particularly enjoyable in this climate, and there's no reason several sharp curves and steep grades along the route, and the cars often travel at the rate of fifteen miles, or more, an hour. Such a railway ought to be manner of the chance to get away earlier, but business mustn't be allowed to suffer in conseshall. There's a way to stimu-late shopping before noon each day, and we're crowding the store full of interest in order way system. Here the lines are all double-tracked, and whatever grades do exist are slight, compared with those on the suburban line. There is little ne-cessity for any specific rules to avoid collisions or telescopes on the city lines, private excursion cars, like that demolished on Saturday, to Victoria Park. The company has in contemplation the building of a half-mile extension, which will give them access to the park by their Queen-street line. At the time this work is undertaken the whole branch line should be double tracked. It will pay the company in the end to do it. A single accident like the one that occurred Saturday will probably cost the company a sum that would go a long way towards putting down another track. But the strongest reason why it should be done is because the public safety demands it.
