

when I have been obliged to indulge in the practise in order to keep my birds alive, and I admit I have crammed a bird occasionally in order to successfully compete against others who have done likewise.

As an exhibitor, I do not care how soon the practice is done away with altogether; and as a judge, I should be the last to disqualify any bird so treated; but a bird that has been subjected to this unnatural process will never gain a single point in favor of winning under me, and if any bird should appear under me which has been unreasonably crammed, the same will be passed without further notice.

A huge mass of food in the crop does not mean size of frame, nor yet quantity of flesh on the breast.

Any judge of waterfowl knows well enough when a bird has been crammed, therefore in justice to absent exhibitors and the birds themselves, he, as a judge, ought not to be influenced by an over-charged crop.
