

After two months' service in the Georgian mountains, and witnessing various unimportant skirmishes, Dr. Lesslie was ordered to Kars, and rode from Trebizond to Erzeroum over the road by which the 10,000 Greeks retreated. At Erzeroum he received orders to return to Constantinople, whence he was again ordered to the front to join the army of the Shipka pass, where he again saw hard fighting and rendered good service. Thence he was sent to join the army for the relief of Plevna, and was present at the battles of the Kamarli pass and Taskeshan, where Baker Pasha, with a small force, kept Gourko's army at bay until the retreat of the Turkish army was secured.

From Taskeshan, he accompanied Sulman's army on its memorable retreat, in the depth of winter, across the Rhodope Balkans to the Aegean Sea, and finding the medical service of the army disorganized, attached himself to the rear guard and attended the wounded under fire during three of the actions in which the rear guard was engaged.

At the close of the war, Dr. Lesslie was appointed medical officer to the Turkish Compassionate Fund (organized by the Baroness Burdett-Coutts), and for three months was in medical charge of 7,000 refugees in the mosques of St. Sophia and Sultan Achmet. He afterwards served with the English army during the Zulu war, but was not present at any of the engagements. He accompanied Clarke's column on its march to Ulundi and return to the coast, and was attached to Major Martyr's party of Dragoons during the first portion of their chase after Cetewayo.

For the next two years he held resident hospital appointments in London and Trinidad, and after a visit to India, China and Australia, went to the Congo with Major-General Sir F. Goldsmid on a special mission for the King of the Belgians. On his return to Europe he was thanked by the King for his services, and was sent out to Africa again with Sir F. de Winton as principal medical officer of the Congo Free State.

After two years' travelling and hard work in the heart of cannibal Africa, varied by occasional fighting with hostile natives on the Upper Congo and its tributary, the Kasai, Dr. Lesslie was again thanked by the King for his services and personally decorated by His Majesty with the Order of
