The Press Excursion.

The editors are home again; and now look out for thrilling amounts of their hair breadth escapes and desperate ventures in the Nor' West! Unhappily Mr. GARR was unable to join the party on this occasion, but nevertheless he signalizes the event with a few sketches as usual. He shows how the party proceeded to Collingwood per Northern Railway train, giving a fine broadside view of that jolliest of conductors, AMOUGH. Then he represents Bro. TRY with a lone hand, putting forth the highly intelligent query, "what's trumps?" Next you have a bit of charming scenery, which will give you a fair idea of the sort of landscape upon which the party feasted their eyes for many miles of the journey; next comes a bold but we fear ineffectual attempt to depict the manly form of Bro. SHANNON, in the act of warbling one of those sweet airs which gave the concerts on board the steambost such a charm; the passing from joy to sadness, you next have a picture of the unhappy AMOUGH gazing meditatively over the side of the boat, and waiting Micawber-like for something to turn up; the next episode pictured is JAMIESON'S speculation in copper ore, this enterprising journalist having invested thirty cents in a huge nugget, which it is his intention to present to his chief on the Belleville Intelligence as a genuine product of the N. P.; last scene of all and certainly sweetest—behold Brother JACKSON threading the mazes of the witching waltz at the Prince Arthur's Landing Ball. This moment of joy more than made up for all the tribulations the genial Era man has been made to suffer because he has shown an inclination to think for himself in political matters

Mr. FRANK SHANLY has left to the City Fathers a bequest of several valuable plans for the improvement of Toronto. Among these are a sublacustrine tunnel to the Island, commencing at the Union Station, and ending at HANLAN'S point. The expense will be considerable, but it is hoped, by this means, loss of life by overcrowded steamers may be to some extent avoided. Mr. SHANLY has a large contract in more than one tropical climate for the constructing of an extensive pavement of good intentions.

How cool and breezy it makes one feel to get hold of an editorial beginning "After the terrible and oppressive heat of the past few day—st!"
