REBUILDING QUEBEC BRIDGE May Be Erected on Same Site as the Collapsed One.

MONTREAL, Feb. 22.—(Special.)—At the Montreal offices of the Quebec bridge engineers to-day, it was said that practically nothing was being done except working at the plans, but that boring would probably begin next spring.

In Quebec it is said that the bridge will be rebuilt on the site of the catastrophe of Aug. 19, 1907, and that it will be at the same height above the level of the river, in spite of the Montreal Shipping Commission's demand.

The preliminary work will be commenced in the spring by making soundings at the site of the bridge in order to find out if the latter is placed on a sufficiently solid foundation to support the surplus of dead weight which the new structure will necessitate.

LARGE AUDIENCE HEAR FINE CHORAL CONCERT

Schubert Choir in Massey Hall Sang Well—Pittsburg Orchestra Plays New Orchestra

There seems to be no abatement in enthusiasm amongst Torontonians for hearing choral music! Last night in Massey Hall a very large audience heard the Schubert Choir in what was on the whole an excellent program.

People are beginning to realize to a just extent the grand work that H. M. Fletcher, conductor of the Schubert Choir and two other choral unions, is doing for musical culture.

Not that there was perfection in the singing of the Schubert Choir, not that it was faultless, but what was good was so good that only praise should be given and what was not so good was due to the accidents of timidity.

It is to be regretted that Mr. Fletcher did not begin his choruses with Fanning's "Dramatic Scene," merely as a matter of giving the members of the Schubert Choir a chance to hear themselves in full voice.

With Fanning's "Dramatic Scene," merely as a matter of giving the members of the Schubert Choir a chance to hear themselves in full voice and thus to gain confidence.

It is not what would be called a beautiful composition, but it deals so much in climaxes of tone and demands so much of bold dramatic utterance that it is thrillingly sensual and grips the heart and imagination in the way which a song of liberty should.

The Schubert Choir sang it with the proper abandon and the conducting chorus, led by the doing splendidly.

"Away, Away With the Wicked Ten" showed off the real tonal power of the choir. It was well sung; the basses and tenors doing splendidly.

The Brahms Ballad, "Wiegelnied" (cradle-song) was a sheer disappointment, not because the fault was in the choir's performance, but because the composer's melody was inconsequential, and his harmonies lacked distinction.

Any third-rate composer could have written better music to the pretty poetry. In Boltwood's "The Night Hath a Thousand Eyes," for soprano and alto, a capella, the ladies of the choir sang sweetly, quite in the spirit of the composition.

However, showed a little thinness in tone, due probably to the fact that the soprano and alto voices were somewhat attenuated and weak.

The "Bottle Hymn" from Wagner's "Rienzi" (opera), arranged for men's voices and orchestra, was well done, sung boldly, with good intonation and phrasing.

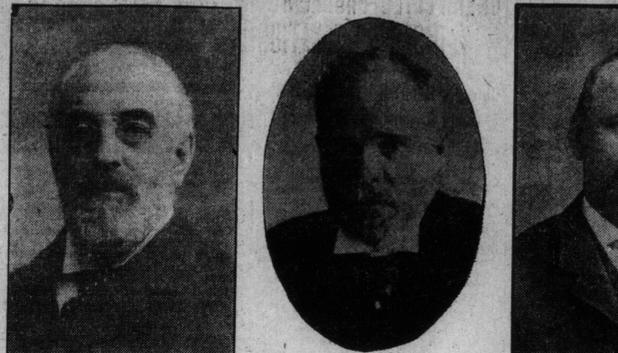

As to the playing of the Pittsburg Orchestra, it is well to go right to the heart of the matter. It is hard to understand why Mr. Paup asked his band to play Wagner's pompous, noisy and melodically uninteresting "Kaiser March."

And why he had the choir sing and join in the singing of a concert, the only thing of the kind on the occasion of a national festival. Nor should Tschalkowsky's "Capriccio Italien" be on the program.

It is nothing more than a "band concert." Anyone could observe that the elaborate orchestration was altogether out of proportion to the quality of the music.

It reminded one of the fantasies or medleys built on obvious negro melodies, such as those of the "band concert" orchestra was Mr. Paup's already celebrated Symphony in A Major, "In der

DANIEL MILLER, EMERSON COATSWORTH, Chairman HENRY SHEARD.

"NATUR" I regret that Mr. Paup should have himself supplied the literary notes for public reading. This symphony is indeed program music, but it is not, as his literary notes would make it appear, a composition devoted to "material" (pictorial description), but to "Empfindung" (expression of moods induced by nature).

But the first movement and the Adagio were genuinely delightful. The principal melody is one of the most beautiful in modern symphonic music, and in the first two movements the band in every department brought out the beauties of this remarkable symphony.

DESSLER WILL DIE

Takes Turn for Worse—Policeman Suspended for Cowardice.

OLEAN, N.Y., Feb. 22.—Nelson Dessler, who killed a policeman yesterday and was himself shot, took a turn for the worse to-night. A police bulletin issued at 9 o'clock said he probably would die within a few hours.

When the police officer Dessler's suit case they found it contained more than $400 worth of dentists' gold and tools such as are used by dentists.

When the chief of police of Bradford came here to-night he was shown the gold. He said that Dessler was probably a robber of the dentist offices in Allegany and Chautauque Counties for the last three weeks.

Was a Mother's Favorite.

BERLIN, Feb. 22.—Nelson Dessler has a reputation here as a youth of being very wild. It is generally believed that he was led into evil ways through reading cheap novels, in which he was captivated by something of an exquisite in his dress, and had a pleasing exterior and suave manner.

NO NEARER SETTLEMENT OF PRESSMEN TROUBLES

Liberal Offers of the International Officials Bring No Favorable Response From Locals.

It looks as the 300 members of Pressmen's Union, No. 10, and Press Assistants' Union, No. 1, both local organizations, are to be expelled by the international body as a result of a majority of members of these lodges having peremptorily refused to pay the assessments levied by the I.T.U.

When called to account for his interference by a member of the T.T.U., the interrupter declared that there were two sides to the story.

The I.T.U. officer remonstrated that if there were two sides they should be given an equal hearing and invited him inside. He remained at the meeting but a short while, and would not speak when called upon, bringing, thereby, denunciation upon himself.
