THE SACRED ROAD.
(G. Basil Barham, in Westminster Gazette.)
From the dunes of the sulcus North Sea Where the birds sob by day and by night,
To the slopes that herald the Alps With their wimplies of snowy white Runs a road that is sacred for all time Where they lie,
Host upon host of our children Who went out to die.
They lie in the vales of Verdun Where the foot of the Hun never trod; They lie on the downs at Peronne Where the hills lift their nearer to God; They lie nameless, uncrowned, immortal Side by side;
Sons of France, sons and brothers of England Who went out and died! In the swamps near the blood-red canal Where they called in the sea to their aid; In the shell-shattered woods of the Somme Where they faced Hell, and were not afraid; Are their graves. There they rested awhile As the radiant-faced mourners passed by— Oh, the glory that is to the children To the fathers and mothers who bore them, To the young girls who gave them the kisses That sweetened the moment of dying— They are resting awhile; there they lie Ere they rise up to walk in God's garden, In that Glory which never can die! —BUY-VICTORY-BONDS— GOING SLOW.

DON'T EASE UP.
(Boston Commercial Review.)
In the old fable of the Hare and the Tortoise attention is called to the successful tortoise, with the moral, "Slow and steady wins the race," but the case of the hare is worthy of consideration, and the moral might well be "Don't go to sleep on the job."
In the last fifteen yards of the final heat of the intercollegiate hundred yards dash, the leading man looked around to see how far ahead he was, and lost the race by a foot. In a canoe race a hundred feet from the finish a man in the leading boat thought he had plenty of time to shift into a more comfortable position, but his crew lost the race by his failure to carry through.
This is no time for hesitation. Our troops, with those of our Allies, have the job of crushing Prussian militarism and frightfulness on the field of battle. We have the duty of beating the Huns by making the new loan a success. With victory in sight, there is danger of failure from over-confidence.

WHY PRICES RISE

This is an actual occurrence in Columbus. A woman who had occasion to use a common drug in making a home preparation bought a pound of it at a drug store. She had often bought it for seven cents a pound, but this time was charged twenty-one cents.
"How is that?" she asked the proprietor. "I never paid more than seven cents a pound for that anywhere before."
"But," expostulated the druggist, "prices have gone way up. Why, I have to pay seven cents a pound for that myself!" —Columbus Dispatch.
