

A- No, sir; it is just that I get all nervous and I don't know whether you would say excited or what it is, but I don't just realize anything that I am doing, like, for a certain time.

Q-114 You would remember, though, if any attempt was made to capture you. Is it your opinion that you simply walked out the door of that train or that you escaped by one of the windows?

A- Well, sir, I couldn't say how I got out, but I imagine I must have got out through the windows, sir. I don't recall going through the window, though.

Q-115 You don't recall breaking the window or anything like that? In other words, if you went out through the window, then the window opened easily and there was no particular difficulty in getting away?

A- Well, sir, I don't know whether the window was broken or not. I couldn't state that.

Q-116 McKinnon, when did this peculiar desire to get away from things first manifest itself? It is not just since you got in the Army?

A- No, sir; I have been always that way.

Q-117 How young were you?

A- Ever since I can remember.

Q-118 Even when you were a little guy you used to run away from home?

A- Yes, sir, always; I can remember my father used to tie a rope around me and tie it to the front porch. I was always running away and going up town, sir.

Q-119 In school days did you run away, then?

A- In school days, sir, when I was going to school I couldn't seem to stay in school; I was always away from school.
