BOYS NEVER TOLD THAT THEIR CHUM WAS DROWNED

Seamen on S. S. Fremont Could Not Stand Tombstones and Smells at Messina.

LONDON, Ont., June 3.—Chas. Chandler was drowned while swimming yesterday with other boys. They ran home and did not say a word about it and the parents searched for their missing fourteen year old son till midnight when the father identified the child at the morgue.

ST. CATHARINES, Ont., June 3.—William W. Fox, till lately president of the Whitman Barks Mfg. Co., died suddenly today.

MONTREAL, June 3.—S. S. Fremont which arrived last night had a unique experience in the Mediterranean. She had as her cargo tombstones, and the stench as they passed Messina so impressed the crew with the connection between the cargo and the recent disaster that they almost mutilated. They played all night and night on the deck and it was with the greatest difficulty that the officers were able to get the ship through.

Hon. G. A. Nantel died today. He was former provincial minister of public works in the Deboucherville and Tullier ministries.

Banty's Confession

By ELMER RIGDON.

The vibrant tones of the church bell rang out and the face of the tender-foot grew solemn. "The sound of that bell always makes me homesick," he said presently.

"That air bells reminds me some vivid of Banty Duff," remarked Shorty Hart on his part. "It was thinking of that unprepossessing beauty when you spoke. Along about last grass that certain to our enlightened community a young woman answered to the cognomen of Eleanor Grey. I don't surmise none that they ever turn out any tinctures that commensurate with the beauty of this little lady. She engages to work in the Surprise restaurant, but she collides with misfortune the minute she strikes town. You see, tender-foot, when she gets off the stage, she leaves her pocketbook containing $100 on the seat. But when she goes back to look for it 15 minutes later, the money is missing! Just the same as it would be in any metropolitan village.

"The bad feature is that the girl had saved this money to pay off a debt on her mother's home back east, and, of course, she felt simply awful. It seems as if the old lady would lose her domicile. Miss Grey worries herself almost sick. We boys offer to take up a collection to raise the amount of the money lost. But Miss Grey, never having seen us before, has her ideas about propriety, and refuses point blank to accept a donation, although she sheds us with tears in her eyes.

"I reckon several days passes and then Banty Duff goes peeterin' over to the restaurant and hangs around outside for a spell. Something is shortly known at the vitals of the aforesaid Banty, who finally calls Miss Grey out of the kitchen where she is compositing some flapjacks, and after looking on the ground as if ashamed of himself says: 'Miss, I wants to tell you that I'm the meanest man in the state, and why I escapes lynchin' so long is a mystery.'

"'What do you mean?' inquired the young lady pretty much concerned.

"'I means it was me that stole your pocket book and I'm mighty sorry for it. I hadn't slept since I committed the heinous crime, and I want to return your money.'

"With that he hands a roll of bills to the girl and is so eternally ashamed of himself that he hasn't the courage to look her in the face. He digs his heel in the ground as if waitin' for her to call him appropriate names; but, as she never speaks, he walks away.

"Of course, everybody shuns Banty after that, and the sentiment is so strong that even Blossom Rock wouldn't drink with him, and when you know Blossom, you'll realize what this means.

"Miss Grey looks scornfully every time she sees Banty, who is the loneliest man in town. Everything goes along in a sort of a monotonous way until Callope Murphy falls sick, and, bet'n the first time he was ever ill, he thinks he's going to die. His conscience prompts him to make certain confessions before he graduates as a corpse, but a most interesting statement he made was the one admittin' that he was the miscreant who stole Miss Grey's money.

"This cleared Banty and restores him to the lovin' regard of the populace. He had simply lied to the girl so she would take the money and pay off her mother's mortgage.

"As I was going to say in the first place," remarked Shorty, "that church bell is tollin' to let the multifold know that the nuptials of Banty Duff and Miss Grey air about to be performed."

AMUSEMENTS.

TRIP TO FRIGID ARCTIC AT NICKEL TODAY.

Very few St. John people—if any—will ever visit the inner circle of the great Arctic Ocean, but at the Nickel today stay-at-homes will be taken through the rigid waters of this northern sea amid gigantic icebergs, ice floes and in the glare of the midnight sun. The magnificent natural coloring of this travel film enhances its reality a hundredfold and the Nickel regrets not being able to hold the picture more than the usual two days for all Saint John will want to see it. It is a real trip aboard a Norwegian exploring steamer to the inhospitable shores of Spitzbergen, a bit of travelling most unusual and beyond the wild-est dreams of the most enthusiastic citizen with a wanderlust. Do not let the children-miss this picture Saturday. In addition there will be three new Pathe pictures of recent issue, the famous Castellucci Trio of Italian musicians—who created another famous last evening—will play their entire new programme, and Miss Evans is to sing another ballad. The Orchestra has fresh offerings in a late packet of New York musical comedy extracts. On Saturday the school children's matinee will be a most notable event for the little ones. The Italians will put on an extra show and the travel picture will be lectured. Extra theatre pictures.

SIMPLY GREAT.

The vaudeville performance at the Princess continues to make a big hit. There are a great number of people wondering how we are giving such a great show at such a ridiculously low price. Well, that's a secret of the business. The show that we have this week is simply great, but wait till you see the one next week. But in the meantime see the show this week. Jules and Marzan, acrobatic wonders; Vasper, that wonderful impersonator; and Dolly Burr, who is giving such a great show at such a ridiculously low price. The Saturday matinee will be a great chance for the little ones to see the act; it is one that is both amusing and educating.

THE BEST SHOW YET AT HAPPY HALF HOUR TODAY.

The warm weather yesterday turned the crowds to the home of pure art, good ventilation and a good show, the H. H. H. and the banner crowd since the opening was present. Today and tomorrow what will be by far the best show yet given at the H. H. H. and one that has not been equalled in this city for a long time will be given. Miss Louise Bernini will sing Heart of My Heart, and Signor Bernini will sing Roses Bring Dreams of Joy. Signor Bernini was the first singer that ever sang this number in public, the author giving him the first copy. Both songs are popular and both will be sung in English. The Arion Ladies' Orchestra will render new orchestral music. The pictures are by far the best that has yet been shown, and it is doubtful if a better picture programme has been seen in this city in months and the beauty of it is they are all new. Dr. Carrivari is a colored transformation picture. Longing for Gold is a powerful drama, showing some splendid scenery and a gold mine. A Fighting Chance is a scenic melodramatic Western picture. The scenes are laid in the American West, the story is a strong one, and the scenery is magnificent, showing some wild mountainous country dotted with forests of raging water is rushing. The Dairymaid's Lovers is a scream, and if you don't laugh at it, you can't laugh. These two pictures alone are worth the price of admission to save nothing of the others, the magnificent singing and the orchestra. One word, don't miss this show.

"ORANGE GROWER'S DAUGHTER" AT STAR.

One of the finest dramas ever put into motion pictures will be presented at the trim Little Star Theatre in York End tonight and on Saturday in the Kalein film, "The Orange Grower's Daughter," a drama of sunny Florida. The scenic wealth of this picture is remarkable. The other pictures are to be: The Scum and the Noble Lord, The Mule Driver's Daughter, Uncle's Palm Tree.

A GRECIAN COIFFURE.

Never before has there been such a radical change in the methods of hair dressing as this spring has seen. Becomingness is considered, rather than fashion, and women are realizing at last the truth—that woman's crowning beauty is her hair—and if the hair is well groomed and becomingly dressed, we may be called good looking whether or we really are or not.

The huge rats and countless puffs of hair and thin alikes have been wearing on to be used in more moderation form.

The advent of the Grecian styles in gowns have brought about the beautiful methods of hair dressing of the same period. The illustration shows a dainty garniture to be worn with the low coiffure.

Around head or heavy gold ribbon edged with gold balls or beads, crosses the hair above the low coils, another crosses below in place of the barrette, joins the upper one behind the ears and the two bands are held in place with bunches of satin Marguerites in white and gold.
