Belcourt moved the adoption of the majority report. He spent half an hour arguing that he had properly conducted himself as chairman. In beginning his argument he took the ground that the only question before the committee and house was whether the food bought from Devlin was the same kind as that supplied by Hatch 'for the Kingston test. The charges made by Mr. Monk that they were not the same had not been sustained by evidence, and the charge was disproved by the analysis of Dr. Ruttan, showing that Hatch's food used at Kingston tested less than 14 per cent of nished by Hatch. Mr. Ellis (St. John) interrupted-Is

Mr. Ellis expressed dissent.

Mr. Belcourt went on to defend Dr. Borden against the charge that after he was warned by Hatch that he was buying bogus goods he took no action. He asserted that it was in consequence of this warning Macfarlane's analysis was obtained. Asked where this appeared in evidence. Mr. Belcourt declined to furnish the proof. Turning to the report which he said the minority was about to offer. Mr. Belcourt said it was unfair and false, and especially unfair to the minister. tioned Devlin's emergency food. Mr. Belcourt thought so, but gave no particulars. In closing, Mr. Belcourt denounced Mr. Monk for making these reckless charges from a morbid desire to make party capital. For himself he did not care if the government did pay too much for the food and would be satisfied if the Devlin goods had saved one soldier's life.

Mr. Monk remarked that the investigation had attracted more attention than he had anticipated. This was a healthy sign. It showed that the people at large felt deep interest in the welfare of the soldiers, also that the matter was easy for the people to understand, and that they have followed the evidence with intelligent interest. The genuine Hatch food was well known, used in hospitals even in this city, and there need have been no mistake in purchasing it. The department knew this food, but had refused to buy it when it was offered. In the face of warnings Dr. Borden bought another food of which knew nothing and which he did not even take the trouble to analyse.

Mr. Monk spoke of Hatch's failure to return and rebut Muir's testimony, explaining that he had spoken to Hatch about it, but found him too ill to come. His illness was in consequence of absurd threats made to him by parties in Montreal that his of the contractors. Mr. Monk described the genuine food as a recognized article of concentrated food, of which one pound was equal to seven food such as could be got anywhere, refused to buy the genuine and tested article, explaining that the imperial government would feed the men, and then after a few minutes' conversation Vitaline at $2 per pound. As soon as it. he made this bargain, Devlin went to the States and soon returned with twelve trunks full of certain broken biscuits which Monk believed was simply refuse of a biscuit factory. Apparently half these trunks were smuggled in, for only six were entered at the custom house. Devlin wrote the copy for the labels, giving a false address and the name of a company which never had an existence and a false description of the food. The majority would not allow him to investigate the banking transaction, but Mr. Monk knew that Devlin was irresponsible, and insolvert. He thought would have march would need to carry forty-five from firms which supplied genuine emergency rations for the imperial army, and refused even to consider them. Mr. Monk pointed out that Dr. went to the States, smuggled in his Borden had not only suppressed food in Saratoga trunks, ground it up,

But the minhe had chosen to make the charges a departmental matter. A fraud had is the cause of the difficulty. evidently been committed, and someone was responsible for it. Devlin had been paid with great haste, in the face of the government analyst's condemnation of the food. Mr. Oliver said he could not free the minister from personal blame in this connection. Mr. Devlin, in spite of his fraud on the government, had not been prosecuted, and Dr. Nielson on whom the responsibility was thrown by the minister, is still in the department. Under these circumstances, Mr. Oliver was sorry to say that he could not clear the minister of militia. Mr. Richardson, liberal, said he hought from Devlin was not shown to not replaced from the food. be the same as that tested at Kingston. The food bought was not em ergency food. It was shown that the ration provided was not one-eighth of a sufficient day's ration. A great fraud had been committed and he was not able to clear the head of the militia department from responsibility for it. This ended the discussion and the vote was taken at 12.30. The amendment was lost by a vote of 73 to 50, six liberals, Richardson, Oliver, Rogers, Puttee, Ellis and Graham voting for the amendment, condemning the minister and the department. Stubbs and McCarthy, two Ma Carthyites, dodged the vote. Mr. Bourassa then took the floor, saying he agreed with Mr. Monet, that this government should not have bought the food at all. The minister
