

attack which left me very weak and settled into Dyspepsia in its worst form. I came home and was advised to try WILSON'S TONIC and SARSAPARILLIAN ELIXIR. I procured one bottle, and it worked like a charm on me; within a week I had gained two pounds of flesh, and by the time I had finished the bottle had gained twelve pounds. I seemed to have new life instilled into me. This summer I had another very bad bilious attack, and was so much reduced that I called in our best physicians—but no use. I again resorted to the ELIXIR and with the same good results. I am now as well as ever.

In Scrofula or King's Evil, or Syphilis—diseases which are destructive to health, comeliness and life, and which are often handed down to the unfortunate offspring of those affected by them, there is no more reliable remedy than this ELIXIR. These two diseases have a strong similarity in some of their symptoms, though of different origin. Both produce swelling of the glands like knots under the skin; in both there is a tendency to forming cold abscesses, or slow gatherings, which break after a long time, and then discharge a peculiar ichor, different from the matter of an ordinary abscess. Both are apt to break out in the skin in scaly or mattery eruptions, slow to heal; both affect the bones, the first, Scrofula, being most apt to affect the joints, as in hip-joint disease, the other the bodies of the bones; and both, if not cured, are very likely to attack the children of those who suffer from them. The ELIXIR is specially prepared for the cure of these diseases, which affect so large a portion of our people, and which are producing a decidedly injurious effect on the vigorous vitality of our race.

In Female Diseases, especially in Ulceration of the Womb, from which so many women suffer, and which affects their general health so severely, this ELIXIR will be found an admirable medicine. In most of these cases there is an accompanying irritation of the bladder, with frequent calls to urinate, and slight relief therefrom. A short trial of WILSON'S TONIC & SARSAPARILLIAN ELIXIR in these cases will do more to prove its efficacy than volumes of written assertion. We could publish many certificates of the benefit to be derived from it in these cases, but refrain, as it is a delicate subject to handle in a public pamphlet.

In Cancerous Sores and Ulcers, in Scald Head, Salt Rheum, and in fact in all the varieties of this disease, WILSON'S TONIC AND SARSAPARILLIAN ELIXIR has no equal. These are all manifestations of an internal Blood Poison, which nature unable, unassisted, to get rid of by reason of some affection of the natural excretories—the glands—throws out through the skin. WILSON'S TONIC & SARSAPARILLIAN ELIXIR cleanses out those glands, and thus carries off this Blood Poison, allowing the skin ulcerations to heal, a process which may be much quickened and made more permanent by the use of WILSON'S PERSIAN SALVE, an Ointment of great efficacy.

In Sick Headache and Epileptic Fits, which have a closer relation than most people imagine, WILSON'S TONIC AND SARSAPARILLIAN ELIXIR should have a fair trial. We say that these diseases have a more intimate relationship than many imagine. By this we mean it will be found in many cases, if enquired into, that the child of a parent affected by frequent attacks of Sick Headache, is more apt to be a sufferer from Epileptic Fits than another. We have so often seen good effects from its use in both of these diseases, that we always now recommend a trial of it to those affected, together with occasional doses of WILSON'S ANTI-BILIOUS PILLS.

In Heart Disease, characterized by Palpitation of the Heart, Shortness of Breath, Faintness, Pain in the region of the Heart, with an irregular pulse, and an indescribable feeling of distress, the ELIXIR will be found to give relief to the severity of the symptoms in all cases, if there is no organic change in the heart.

In General Debility and Nervous Prostration, which are characterized by a great variety of symptoms, arising from a want of tone and strength in all the organs of the body, this ELIXIR acts like a charm. In these diseases the heart is apt to be distressed by vague uneasiness and nervous palpitation, the circulation is languid, the skin sometimes dry and feverish, sometimes bathed with a clammy perspiration, the muscles are flabby and easily tired, the stomach and bowels disordered, and often affected by wind colic; in fact, mind and body are alike weak, nervous, and out of joint. WILSON'S TONIC AND SARSAPARILLIAN ELIXIR is the cure for these complaints—its depurative action, exercised through the Liver, Kidneys, Skin and Intestines, increasing the natural discharges with a general tonic, strength-producing influence on the nerves and muscles.
