Basketball. Friday afternoon, Toronto and McGill met in the decisive game of the Intercollegiate series. McGill was greatly weakened through the unfortunate illness of Calder and Douglas, whose combination work and heavy checking were sadly needed. The game started fast and Mel Brock, Toronto's phenomenal centre, scored from a long pass. Three more times Toronto found the McGill basket before the home team woke up; then the battle waxed furious and McGill's combination had Toronto guessing for the rest of the period. McGill's hard luck in penalty shots was wholly responsible for Toronto's lead of five points at half time. The second half, however, left no doubt as to the superiority of the Toronto team. Once a comfortable lead was secured they played on the defensive, but at no time were they allowed to loaf. McGill's combination was fast and effective but their checking and shooting weak. Mel Brock was the life of the Toronto team. He found the basket from almost every possible position. Cockfield played a steady consistent game and was easily McGill's star. The final score was 41-25 with Toronto Intercollegiate Champions.
