Nestling amongst the trees or marking the plains of Southern Manitoba, many towns and villages have sprung up during the past thirty years, bringing industry and business where once the buffalo roamed and the Indian followed, unmindful of the wealth of human food and the addition to the commercial trade of the world, which was ready with a little encouragement to spring from the earth beneath his feet, and go on maturing, adding growth with every blink of the summer sunshine, and fresh vitality with every summer shower. Now the "noble red man" has gone farther and father "towards the land of the setting sun," and the cultivation of the soil of the West has been undertaken by the sons and daughter of the race whose names are written in the history of those who have promoted the civilization and commerce of the world.

Prominent in situation, in size and in business enterprise amongst the towns of Southern Manitoba is Morden, standing in the center of fertile lands, surrounded by progressive and industrious farmers. The population of the town is about 2,000. It is situated about 80 miles from Winnipeg, on the Pembina branch of the C. P. R. The first man to settle in the district was Mr. Geo. Cullen. A great colonization movement was made in 1875, when seventeen townships were divided amongst 6,000 Mennonites. The colony has done well, and to-day it numbers about 20,000, all in a prosperous condition. In 1878, Adam Nelson founded the town of Nelson, about seven miles north-west of the present town of Morden. In 1883, the construction of the Pembina railway branch was begun, and the Morden of to-day owes its importance to the advent of that railway. The town was not incorporated until 1895. Mr. H. P. Hansen, now manager Manitoba Cream Separator Co., Winnipeg, was first mayor, and the first man to open up business there. The town has now an elevator capacity of 210,000 bushels, and about a million bushels is shipped annually. A board of trade is established, of which Mr. C. D. Sharpe, M. D., is secretary-treasurer. Morden has eight churches and Salvation Army barracks. There are two schools, one a stone building of six rooms, and the other a frame of four rooms. There is a municipal and fire hall combined. The Freemasons have catered to the wants of the town by building a hospital, which was opened in March last. The manufactures of the town are: woollen mills, flour mills, cannery, and marble, granite and pump factories. Real estate is well represented in the firm of Messrs. Ruddell, Pickle & Hobbs. The firm does a large Western as well as a local business. Mr. E. Ball does a large trade as a butcher and general merchant, and also deals extensively in cattle. He has been in business in Morden for nine years. A. P. Brown came here from Carberry ten years ago. He runs a flourishing hardware business, with which he has now combined plumbing. The woollen mills are ably managed by Mr. F. Schneider, and a very good class of material is turned out from there. The tannery is quite a Western institution, where furs are treated along with the manufacture of leather, and a high grade in both branches of the tanner and furrier's trade is turned out. Mr. Geo. Ashdown conducts a fine hardware business, which he has made in every way a success. Mr. Jas. Blair has been equally successful in his grocery business. The Bank of Hamilton is one of the mainstays of the district, and the Morden staff are always kept busy. The marble and granite factory is one of the best businesses in the town, and Mr. A. S. W. MacIntyre is to be congratulated on the expansion his highly-finished work has been the means of imparting to the business.

Morden has prospects of becoming a great city, and if business enterprise and situation count for much that destiny is in store for it.
