The Last Mass.

"KYRIE ELEISON." "KYRIE ELEISON," slow the chant wafted from the choir, swelling through the old cathedral, sinking low, then rising higher and higher, far above the vaulted arches, far above the darkened dome.

"CHRISTE ELEISON." "CHRISTE ELEISON," wafted the chant from out the choir, answered by the roll of thunder and the lightning's vivid fire.

An aged priest bent over the altar, breathing words of solemn prayer. On his face a look as awful as the dead Christ's face, which he had gazed upon.

Glared the lightning, rolled the thunder, and the storm waxed louder, fiercer, drowning the deep organ's tone.

Now his voice rose clearer, clearer, ringing like a silver bell.

Fair his face beamed with a radiance, brighter than the golden sun.

For the willing spirit tasted of that life almost begun.

When with "DOMINUS VOBISCU" he bade his people all farewell.

Glared the lightning, rolled the thunder, and the storm waxed louder, fiercer, drowning the deep organ's tone.

Forward press the congregation, to Heaven ascend a mighty shout.

For the spirit of their pastor, from his mortal tomb has flown.

CATHOLIC PRESS.

SIGNOR VILLA has ready a new law of divorce for the early consideration of the Piedmontese Parliament.

DR. PUSEY in his recent book, "What is Faith as to Everlasting Punishment," makes a very pregnant remark: "Men strangely do not reflect that the denial of this doctrine involves the terrible blasphemy that He, the Truth, so taught, that His disciples, on the authority of His words, that he did, in fact, not foresee the effect of His own words. He who knew all things, who was God as well as man, who neither deceives nor is deceived."

It makes one's blood curdle to read of the horrible assassination of the latest Jesuit martyr, not in China, or Tibet, or Japan, but in a semi-Christian and American Republic.

A GREAT deal of good ammunition has been wasted against the outworks of what is known as pernicious literature, and, it is hoped, with why does Dr. Pusey stop short in its application? If it holds as regards future punishment, why does it not hold with respect to the prerogatives of Peter and the consequent heritance of the Holy See, not to mention other Catholic doctrines to which Dr. Pusey gives only a cloudy, half-hearted assent? The matter is worth his consideration, and not his alone.—London Register.

THE first victory of the Land League is recorded in the disagreement of the jury trying the Traversers in Dublin. The heart of the Government is broken and Ireland feels triumphant. "Coercion" is now the cry. "Enlarge the dungeons, build new jails, suspend the trial by jury and convict on simple complaint" is the English demand today.

A DANIEL come to judgment! And such a Daniel! And from such a quarter, too! Mr. Froude has been writing a history of "The English in Ireland in the Eighteenth Century," and the work is now being commented upon by the journalists of the United Kingdom.

LAST Charles Thynne, who died in London last week, was one of an astonishing but not exceedingly limited class—the convert children of Anglican bishops.

CASES of conversion to the Catholic Church are sometimes reported from quarters in which hostility to the Catholic faith is generally thought to be hereditary.

THE RULE of English opinion on the Irish question bears the same old trade-mark that has been familiar ever since discussion of the question began; but there are some Englishmen who do a little thinking for themselves, without reference to the trade-mark.

IN AN ENGLISH cable despatch to the Canadian press (it was not sent to the American press) we find a report of a banquet given to Mr. Franklin Gowen, late of the Reading railway, but now deposed.

MR. GOWEN, who was now converting one of Her Majesty's Provinces into a camp of armed and blood-thirsty rebels, for no one knows better than Mr. Gowen how to deal with such people.

IT makes one's blood curdle to read of the horrible assassination of the latest Jesuit martyr, not in China, or Tibet, or Japan, but in a semi-Christian and American Republic.

IT is generally believed that the police will seize the Land League offices, and the League will be disbanded by proclamation.

some effect; but there is a class of pernicious literature which has not, as yet, received the attention it deserves from those who hope to see a pure Catholic literature built up and supported on strong foundations. This class of literature is that which owes its introduction into Catholic families to the fact that it bears the impress of a cross or a shamrock, and carries the imprint of a soi disant Catholic publisher. It sells, however, and though the day has gone when it had a monopoly of the Catholic literary market, it still holds no inconsiderable place.

THE Herald's cables say that Parnell, in an interview on Friday, declared that the Government wanted to frighten and intimidate people out of organization and agitation.

THE movement for the nonpayment of rents hasly counselled the people to remain quiet.

Excitement in Ireland, consequent upon the arrest of Davitt, has given place to a quiet determination to await the course of events and make the best preparations for meeting any further action the Government may take under the Coercion Act.
