THE WESLEYAN.

APRIL 13.

TO THE BIBLE !

Thy starry light ! Beaming so tenderly o'er earth's dreary waste, Makes it all bright, And deserts blossom, whero thy glad wings haste. Thy sun-lright ray ! (Heaming so gloriously, divinely bright, Chases away Chases away The sombre shadows of our nature's night. Who'd sing thee true ? Not one, though Gabriels harp and skill were given. Who'd pairt to view The glowing wonders of this boon of Heaven ? No voice replies,-No hand is equal to the task of might,-No seraph tries To pour thy radiant beauties on the sight ! Our rock of faith ! Our joy in grief, our light in darkest hour ; What thy word saith, We trust, in spite of man's or demon's power. Our charter thou ! To heaven-built kingdoms, fadeless crowns of joy And let us now To thy wide-spread our energies employ. Let thy march speed ! Till all earth's weary, burdened sons rejoice, And all agreed To hearken to thy heaven-inspired voice. L. A. D. Guysboro', N. S.

EXTRACT

FROM A LECTURE ON ST. PAUL,

READ BEFORE ANNUAL MEETING OF GRAFTON ST. SABBATH SCHOOL.

In the record of the Acts of the Apostles, how quickly we single out Paul as the central figure. Though he was not called to be an apostle until some years after the twelve were chosen, how soon he rose to be the chief among them. He was one raised up by God to do a great work in the world, and everything, in his early life and education, was calculated to fit him for the purpose for which he was intended.

Tarsus being his birth place exercised considerable influence over his life. As one writer says—" Paul is a Jew, a Roman and a Greek. An apostle to all nations, he is himself of all nations: Born outside Judea, he is still a Jew of pure blood. Pharisee and Benjamite as he is, he is a Roman by right of birth. A Roman and Jew by birthright, he is a Greek by the intellectual atmosphere of his nativity. The three elements were well balanced. Had he been born at Athens or Alexandria his mind would have been, humanly speaking, unduly Grecian. Born at Jerusalem, his mind would have had to Gentile apprehension a narrow, dry, rabbini cal aspect. But Tarsus gave him unconsciously a three-sided nationality toward the triune civilization in which he was to move."

Every stage in Paul's education was a known throughout eternity; for it is preparatory step. He was learned in the | written in the Lamb's book of Life. Greek wisdom and philosophy, versed in suited to us now: but we must remember that the rules and directions touch the higher life of man, they concern the spiritual welfare of the race, and we believe, "that in all ages, every human heart is human." In reviewing the life of St. Paul, what a checkered page is before us. He had presented to his view, what seemed to him a career of worldly success, he chose rather to suffer affliction with the people of God; and to him, certainly the cup of affliction was full. In the eleventh of Corinthians he thus speaks of his sufferings : "Of the Jews five times received I forty stripes save one. Thrice was I beaten with rods, once was I stoned, thrice I suffered shipwreck, a night and a day I have been in the deep. In journeyings often, in perils of water, in perils of robbers, in perils by mine own countrymen, in perils by the heathen, in perils in the city, in perils in the wilderness, in perils of the sea, in perils among false brethren. In weariness and painfulness, in watchings often, in hunger and thirst, in fastings often, in cold and nakedness ' Yet he could triumphantly exclaim : " But none of these things move me, neither count I my life dear unto myself, so that I might finish my course with joy, and the ministry which I have received of the Lord Jesus, to testify the gospel of the grace of God," Paul's death, also, was the consummation of a grand life: when he was brought before Nero the second time, sure that he could expect no mercy, how sure and confident is his dying testimony to Timothy : "For now I am ready to be offered, and the time of my departure is at hand. I have fought a good fight, I have finished my course, I have kept the faith : Henceforth there is laid up for me a crown of righteousness, which the Lord the righteous Judge, shall give to me at that day ; and not to me only, but unto all them also that love his appearing." If Paul in his ambition desired fame and honour, if it was a trial to him to give up the hope of earthly distinction, if he expected his name to be obliterated from the records of the great ; how differently God controlled events. Had he remained as Saul the learned Pharisee, though a distinguished man, his name would probably, in the lapse of time have been forgotten; whereas it will now be remem bered and blessed to the end of time, and emerging from heathenism, can be so well come to the eighth chapter. Here Bildad says (Job viii. 4), " If thy children have sinned against him, and he have cast them away for their transgression." This is all the reference to the loss of Job's property and children we have been able to find in the Book of God. I have always been taught that they were destroyed, and could I find any Scripture to that effect, I should certainly believe it now; but I find none. The servants who came to him, bringing the reports, were under the influence of Satan, and made him believe ; but that the reports were not true, I think the Scripture clear enough.

I find in Job. i. 2, 3, that he had seven sons and three daughters. The number of his sheep was seven thousand; camels, three thousand; oxen, five hundred yoke; and that he had five hundred she-asses. In the last chapter of Job, 12th and 13th verses, I find that Job had fourteen thousand sheep, six thousand camels, one thousand yoke of oxen, and one thousand she-asses. He had also seven sons and three daughters. Hence we say that Job's property and his sons were not destroyed, but that it was only a makebelieve of the devil.

JOHN W. BELL. Near Springfield, Tenn.,

REMARKS ON THE FOREGOING.

The views of our correspondent have the merit of originality. He says, in addition, that the last chapter of Job bears the same date as the first--cir 1520. He forgot that our translators put in the margin, "Moses is thought to have wrote the Book of Job whilst among the Midianites, before Christ cir 1520." Dr. Hales thinks Job "lived about 184 years before the time of Abraham." Abraham was born. according to Usher, B. C. 1996. The calamity which came upon Job's children, servants, and property, seems to have been as real as that which came upon his body. There is a curious addition made to the ninth verse of the second chapter in the Septuagint (the. Greek translation of the Old Testament: 'And when much time had passed, his wife said to him, How long wilt thou hold out, saying, Behold I wait yet a little while, expecting the hope of my Waken that wondrous tenderness in thine, deliverance ? for, behold, thy memori- If all thy better self to life is stirred al is abolished from the earth, even thy place to place and house to house, wait ing for the setting of the sun, that I may rest from my labors and my pangs which now beset me: but say some dren given him after his restoration to prosperity. The Septuagint has a curious variation and addition at the close of the book, which some of our readers

and his son's sons, the fourth generation.

13. And there were born to him seven may be curious to see. Here it is :

word against the Lord and die."

I PRAY FOR THEE. BT 8. M. D. [Republished by request.]

When thou art very weak and weary, dear, When it is dark and all seems dreary here, And suddenly a light almost divine Upon thy doubting eyes and heart doth shine, And thou the way to go dost plainly see, Know, dearest heart, that then I pray for thee.

Far off in little chamber I am saying These words, all softly, and God hears me praying : Dear Lord I do not know If all is well With him whom I love so. But thou canst tell. O give him light to see! O with him ever be Till all is well

When with a weight of sorrow and of fears Crushed to the earth thou weepest bitter tears. Lo! gently round thee arms of tenderest love Raise thee from depths of woe, and far above Thou hear'st a sweet voice saying "Trust in

Know dearest heart, that then I pray for thee. Then with full heart of love to God I'm saying These words, all softly, and he hears me praying: O Lord, perhaps to-day, Down in the dust, • He thinks not thou didst say "Heart, in me trust !" Oh save him, Lord, in love; Oh lift him up above,

When all the answering beauty of the soul Is throbbing, thrilling, with the rapturous

Of nature, as an odorous summer night The tremulous stars thy senses all delight, Thou feelest higher joys than these can be, Know, dearest heart, that then I pray for thee. For at my twilight window I am saying These words, all softly, and God hears praying: Dear Father, as to-night He sees the sky With glorious beauty light, To thee on high Who this rare radiance wrought Raise his adoring thought,-Above the sky.

When tenderly beside some stricken child Thou standest and dost speak of Jesus mild. Dost whisper of his patience and his death, seems to thee as if some quickening breath Of God's rich power in thine own words might be,

Know, dearest heart, that then I pray for thee. With all the knowledge-power of love I'm saying These words, all softly, and God hears me praying:

Be with him, Lord, to-day And him inspire: As lovingly a way, A path far higher. He shows to blinded heart To his thoughts warmth impart; His words inspire.

And if e'en now eyes better loved than mine By other's look, or touch, or gentle word, If one is dearer now than I can be,

MES. CRAWFORD, of Mount Pleasant though cut down in the midst of her days felt that for her to die would be gain, HENRY BULYEA, just blooming into manhood was removed from time in a most unexpected manner by the falling of a tree, in the garden of Joseph Frazie, one of the flowers was nipped by the winds unkindly blast and it soon faded away.

CORNELIUS PARLEE, advanced in life. was called to mourn the loss of his son to whom he looked for comfort and support. Two vacant seats in the family circle of JOHN WRIGHT remind him of the fleeting nature of all earthly joys.

Death has raised two additional Monuments in the Church Yard, at the Head of Mill Stream, by the removal of two members of the family of GEORGE HAYS. These with many others have fallen victims to that fearful disease diphtheria.

To swell the number we have within the last few days committed to the tomb three members of the family of PETER CARE WRIGHT, and what adds to the calamity both himself and his wife and the rest of his family were all prostrate with the disease so that they were prevented from following their loved ones to the grave. and at the present time the recovery of some other members of the family is very doubtful.

Reports from other localities remind us that we are not the only community that has been called to endure the chastening hand of the Almighty. And thus the various forms of human woe that affect our fallen nature declare to us very forcibly that we live in a world disordered by sin, and it will be well if National calamities and domestic sorrows lead men to recognize the band of God in the movements of his providence and be the means of turning them to him that smites them.

It is well for us amid the pressure of life's difficulties to look away from the dark side of the picture, and fix an eve of faith on that beautiful world where there is no sorrow nor crying, that when we depart this life we may reach that happy place,

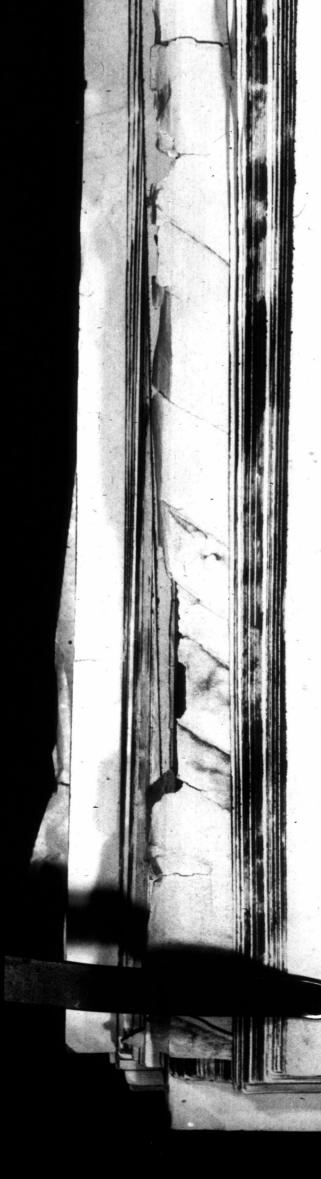

Where sighing grief shall weep no more And sin shall never enter there. W. TWEEDIE. Apohaqui, April 4th, 1878.

MRS. ELLEN J. DAVISON.

Died at Bay Verte, Feby. 2nd, 1878. Ellen J., the beloved wife of Mr. Richard Davison, in the 34th year of her age. When about ten years old the deceased gave evidence of adoption into the family divine and of the renewing of the Holy Ghost. From that period to life's latest moment she gave undoubted proof of the implanted life. Although her life was the reverse of ostentatious, yet no good enterprise lacked her aid so long as the decaying tabernacle would allow. It seemed her aim to be no idler in the vineward of the Master. As a teacher in the Sabbath school she was painstaking and zealousas organist in the church she was efficient and devout-as a member of the church she was consistent and of good report-as a member of the community she was greatly beloved. But her work is done-and while it was yet noon her sun went down. Her illness though protracted was cheerfully endured. When death came he was den ded of his terrors, and she met (him without alarm, She sleeps as a wise virgin, waiting to hear, "Behold the Bridegroom cometh." Bless. ed is the memory of the just.

Out of the dust! whole

Mar. 4, 1878.

Roman law, and instructed in the religion and institutions of the Jews, and thus he was enabled to meet, on an equal footing, men of these three most important nationalities of the day. His acquaintance with the Hebrew writings qualified him, when on his missionary work, to meet with convincing arguments, all objections of the Jews, to Christ's claim to the Messiahship. Even his connection with the council which condemned Stephen, would be of benefit to him, for thus he would I did not love Job. I think, now, I can doubtless become acquainted with many account for it. Whenever I showed any of the arguments they would bring to bear against the doctrines of Christ, and would be prepared in his preaching, to confute them. His persecution of the Christians led to his conversion, and his transformation into Paul the Apostle.

The education of Peter, James, John, and the other disciples, leaving out of the question their association with the Lord, the great Educator, would, in accordance with their humble position, naturally be limited. They certainly did a great work, but it was left for Paul to extend and complete that work; and for that purpose, in the schools of Tarsus, and the synagogues at Jerusalem, God was preparing and fitting him. What a life work was that of Paul! Christianity brought into all the then known world; and down through eighteen hundred years, the influence of his labors have been felt, and will be felt while the world remains. Matthew, Mark, Luke and John, recorded the wonderful story of Christ's redemption of man, and re vealed the plan of salvation. Paul, in his inspired epistles, has laid down rules, and given counsel to guide and keep men in the right direction.

In Paul's epistles we seem to have a combination of the different styles, which characterized the writings of the other principle disciples. We find the enthusiasm and energy of Peter, the plain practical teaching of James, the tender sympathising affection of John, the beloved and loving disciple: and added to this, we find striking originality, beautiful imagery, and depth of wisdom. People of all ages, in all the varied situations of life have, in the epistles of Paul, been able to find words suited to them in all their perplexities. In prosperity or adversity, in positions of honour or of inferiority, in spiritual rejoicings or laden with doubts and misgivings, at all times, we may receive counsel and comfort from St. Paul. Some may wonder how letters, addressJOB AGAIN.

We have always regarded Job as the patient man of God. We have only wondered how so rich a man-in fact, how any man-could be so patient under such trials. I think I have heard this good man preached about more than any other character in the Bible, Christ only excepted. In my childhood sign of temper, some one would remind me of Job. When a marble or ball was lost, "Job" was whispered to me; and if I smashed a finger or stumped a toe, and tears came to my little eyes, or I were heard to say "O!" they were sure to tell me that Job did not cry. The first doubt my mind ever took in, relative to God's word, was, if there really ever was any Job, and if he were made of the same stuff of which little boys were made.

I find, in viewing Job's history, that the Lord gave him into the hand of Satan, and said, "Behold, all that he hath is in thy power." Soon a messenger came to Job, saying, The Sabeans have taken off all thy oxen and thy asses, and 17. And Job died, an old man and full of destroyed all thy servants but me; and days; and it is written that he will rise then another, saying, The fire of God has fallen and consumed your sheep and your servants, all but me; then another, saying, The Chaldeans have carried away all your camels, and your servants are destroyed. Last, one came and said, Thy sons and thy daughters were eating in their eldest brother's house, and there came a wind, and the house fell, and thy sons are all dead; I only am left to tell it. Then we read, "In all this Job sinned not, nor charged God foolishly." Here the question arises to our mind, Were Job's property and his children really destroyed? or, Did those messengers carry to him false reports? 1 am inclined to believe that the messages were not true.

That Job believed they were destroyed I have no doubt-yea, and that he continued in this belief throughout his afflictions. Yet I am compelled to believe they were unharmed. After reada time so different from this, people just farther mention of these reports till I have done their murde ous work !

ons and daughters, the pangs and dearest heart, believe 1 pains of my womb which I bore in vain Between my sobbing and my tears I'm saying with sorrows; and thou thyself sitteth

These words, all softly, and God hears me down to spend the nights in the open praying : Dear Lord, if it is best, air among the corruption of worms, and Make him more glad! Give to him joy and rest; I am a wanderer and a servant from

I may be sad-I can most lonely be-Dear Lord, if only he Is made more glad.

It is Nor think that I in arrogance would claim indeed remarkable that while the The credit of these gifts. In Jesus' name property of Job was doubled after his I'm praying for thee always—and my prayer Is answered—that I too may have my share affliction, his children were of the same number; but they were clearly not the In thy great nobleness, and thus may be Doing some work because I pray for thee. same spoken of in Job i.; cf. viii. 4.

The narrative implies miraculous in-Thus always in my loneliness I'm saying terposition, and the miracle is the more Such words, all softly, and God hears me obvious by the precise number of chil-praying: Dear Lord, both he and I Are far from strong; To each of us be nigh; The way is long. Perhaps he needs not me-Jesus, we both need thee : Make us more strong !

sons and three daughte s. 14. And he Special Conference Committees were in called the first, Day, and the second, Casia, and the third, Amalthæ's horn. session almost all last week. The President who sat on all of them, must have 15. And there were not found in comparison with the daughters of Job, fairer been very fagged. I hear that the upshot women than they in all the world; and of the meeting of the Theological Institutheir father gave them an inberitance among their brethren. 16. And Job lived tion Committee is, that it is almost cerafter his affliction a hundred and seventy tain the new college will be founded in years : and all the years he lived were two the Midland Counties.-Lon Methodist. hundred and forty; and Job saw his sons again with those whom the Lord raises DEATHS ON THE APOHAQUI CIR-CUIT.

OBITUARY

This man is described in the Syriac In the early part of last fall those who book as living in the land of Ausis, on professed to be weather wise gave it as the borders of Idumea and Arabia; and his name before was Jobab; and having their opinion that owing to a certain taken an Arabian wife, he begot a son pecaliarity in the state of the atmoswhose name was Ennon. And he himself phere the coming winter would -be was the son of his father Zare, one of the marked by a general tendency to dis ase sons of Esau, and of his mother Bosgruha, so that he was the fifth from Abraam. in the surrounding countries. This pre-And these were the kings who reigned in diction has been fully realized in re-Edom, which country he also ruled over; gard to this locality. It has never been first, Balac, the son of Beor, and the name our lot to witness so many scenes of morof his city was Dennaba; but after Balac, Jobab, who is called Job; and after him tality as have fallenbunder our notice dur

Asom, who was governor out of the couning the few months of our connection try of Thæman: and after him Adad, the with this circuit. son of Barad, who destroyed Madiam in Among the more aged may be noticed the plain of Moab; and the name of his city was Gethaim. And his friends who first came to him were Eliphaz, of the children of Esau, king of the Thæmanites, Baldad, sovereign of the Sauchæans, Sophar king of the Minæans.-Nashville Ad.

A New York Catholic paper, writing of the death of Pope Pius IX., an old gentleman who did not die until eighty-six years of age, says :-- " They have killed ed to people living so many years ago, in ing the first chapter of Job, I find no and twenty-two days of imprisonment J. S. A.

wa fu th wa de cli on Su is us con is us con is us con in fro per fro per the fina per Per

SWO

of (

ing Wh

in t

the the

who pure

ed t

of I

H

the

tora

WILLIAM G. TUTTLE.

Died at Wentworth, March 26th, at the age of 52, beloved and respected by all who knew him, Mr. Wm. G. Tuttle. His end was peace. Such are the tidings, telling, again of death (whose cold acy hand none can withstand), breaking in upon love's strong ties, snapping them as easily as the ice storm is snapping the hage boughs of poplar and willow close by the window where we are penning these lines, and leaving broken hearts to mourn over the loss of a kind husband and affectionate father. For six months tender hands have watched him and readered constant attentions, but nothing can break death's grasp away.

Night dews fall not more gently to the ground,

Nor weary worn out winds expire so soft." It seemed but a gentle sleep so quietly the spirit took its flight. We sorrow not as those without hope, in the midst of wilderness wanderings the Lord vouchsafed his guidance, and amidst much glory and fervent faith, he passed peacefully away to the better land.

"The Christian sleeps-in Jesus-blessed thought!

tears quietly fell asieep trusting in Christ Hush, mourners ! though ye could, awake him not!

Would ye recall him from the home of bliss, MRS. SHARP of Carsonville, after many The "better country," to a land like this? To weep as we are weeping.

No, brother ! slumber now, and take thy rest, In the low sleeping place which Christ hath blessed, Till the great Easter morning light the skies."

W. G. L.

eighty-eight years of toil in this vale of looking for a better resurrection.

years of the most exemplary connection with the Methodist Church in that place, entered the dark valley in triumph leaving behind a blessed testimony that she had gone to be with God.

MR. MCMILLEN of the Head of Mill Stream who after

