Ontario Liberals will Depend on the Liquor Interest

The edict has gone forth. The roads have parted. The daped probibitionists have been insuited and cast aside. by their Liberal friends. Cheap Whiskey, Open Saloons and We Don't Care Who Knows It, is now the motto of the Liberal party of this province. When a deputation of prominent temperance people waited on Premier Hardy the other day they were driven from his presence with revilings. Perhaps that is incorrect. Rather he reviled them to his hearts content, told them he had no intention of keeping the promises made them, and then strutted out and left them chagrined and dis-

As the temperance people can no longer be deluded with false promises it wants them either whipped into line or driven out. It declares that "the intemperate conduct of the men and women who insulted the Premier at Thursday's interview, the dogged efforts made to fasten a promise upon the government that was never given, and the studied misrepresentation of the amendments promotives or good judgment of the people who assume to speak for the temperance workers of Ontario." Here is a direct accusation of being liars, parvaricators and bulldozers against the leaders of

Among these leaders are many eminent divines, ladies of the highest for nine months. For the legislative reputation for benevolence and, all charitable works; all these were among those who waited on the Outario government. Now because they have dared to kick over the party traces they are all that is bad, dishenest and insincere. They are told by the Banner they can't "coerce" Premier Hardy into taking a position that would put the reins of power into the hands of the Conservative party. Here Dominion no doubt his resignation we have a direct admission that the government relies on the support of the license machine for its success. In the past it has had the temperance support also. Now, it is being forced to drop one and it prefers to stick to the speaker instead of the premier.

The Hamilton Times the other day told the temperance people if they feel proud of their provincial leader. didn't like what the Liberal's were doing to go to the Conservatives and see what would be the result. One result, we can tell the Times, would be that the temperance people would get no hypocritical promises. By being honest with the prohibitionists in the past the Conservative party lost many votes. It said distinctly it did not profess to be the pioneer of the movement. As a result many in its ranks relied on the false promises of the Mowat-Hardy aggregation, and left it For years nine-tenths of the temper-

A TRAVELER IN FRANCE.

What He Saw, Did and Heard In a Railway Carriage. He was traveling in France, and he had comforted himself down in the corner of a first class railway compartment. He was alone in the carriage. The train, which was just on the point of starting, would run four hours without stopping. 'Four hours' quiet, uninterrupted reading," he told himself, "accompanied by a fat cigar." And he purred at the prospect of reading and smoking-and smoking undis-turbed by the quibbles of chance acquaintances. And he did everything so easily, so elegantly. He was a gentleman-an Amer ican gentleman. He placed a handful of papers by his side. He produced a jeweled cigar case from his breast pecket. He put a cigar between his lips. He closed the case with a snap and returned it to its resting place—slowly, calmly. From his trousers pocket he produced a pearl penknife, with which he clipped the cigar and then returned the knife to its resting place—calmly, slow ly. From his waistcost pocket—what a host of pockets men have, to be sure!—he produced a silver matchbox and struck a

The train glided out of the station The young lady alranged her skirts, and as she did she saw the match burn to the end. She saw the match fall from the gentleman's hand. She saw the cigar case produced, the cigar replaced among its fra-grant companions and the case returned to the pocket.

She chuckled—almost aloud.

He swore—almost aloud. He buried himself in his paper.

She laughed outright. He looked up. And what did he see? He saw a little, neatly gloved hand find its way into a tailor made skirt pocket. He saw the hand embracing the daintiest of little cigarette cases and a gold. matchbox en suite. He saw a cigarette between the first and second fingers of the left hand and a match between the finger and thumb of the right. And what did he hear?

An Expert In Stale Lager.

A well known newspaper man was once witness in the police court in a case in which a saloon keeper was charged with which a saiobn keeper was charged with selling lager beer during the prohibition era. Captain Tom Glenn appeared for the defendant. The reporter was placed on the stand for the prosecution. The witness testified to having tasted the beer, which was being sold under the name of "rice beer." after it was brought to the police station and swore to the best of his judgment that it was stale lager beer. Captain Glenn took the witness and

"You say it was stale lager beer you tasted?" placing a heavy emphasis on the word "stale.

'Yes, sir.' "Isn't it true that people who drink ager beer always drink it fresh?" Yes, sir, that is true. 'Then tell the court how you ever be ne an expert on stale beer.

The question seemed a clincher, but the reporter composedly replied: When I was a youth, my father used t keep keg beer at home in summer, and on account of my age did not allow me to drink it. When the keg became flat or stale, it was rolled under the woodshed and a fresh one put on tap. I would go to the woodshed at the eventide and partake freely of what was left in the discarded kegs. In fact, you might say, Captain Glenn, that I was raised on stale

The Old Cambridge Bridge. You now cross the bridge at night through a circle of radiant lights glancing in brilliant lines through all the suburbs, but in the old nights there was here and there in the distance a dim oil lamp. In time oil gave place to kerosene, then came gas, then electricity, and still the brighter the lamps the more they multiplied. The river itself was different. The Glass Snake. The superstition that the glass snake breaks in pieces at a sudden alarm and re-unites its various parts after the danger is over arises from the fact that when threatened with attack by a bird or animal this snake throws off its tail, which wiggles about on the ground and distracts the attention of the enemy while the snake makes its escape. This peculiar means of eluding attack is practiced also by two or three kinds of lizards. Both snake and lisards grow a new tail in a few weeks.
