THE FOURTH OF JULY. For the fifth time in the history & this city Dawson assumes holiday garb in honor of the Fourth of July a date which must always stand out conspicuously among the occasions devoted to patriotic demonstrations. The spirit and enthusiasm with which the great natal day of American sovereignty has always been observed in Dawson points with emphasis to the feeling of cordiality which of late has been so manifest in the relations between the two great branches of the Anglo-Saxon race. The United States and Great Britain are now united so closely by comare now united so closely by commercial, industrial and domestic ties that a rupture between the two seems almost inconceivable. There are not wanting in either country those who take a sufficiently optimistic view of the situation to believe that a political alliance between the two, having for its purpose the preservation of the world's peace, is not ing hurgiarized. The two premises improbable.

"It is by no means difficult to understand the process of reasoning by which that conclusion is reached. The series of impositions which led up to the separation of the American colonies from the mother country were not sustained by the great mass of English people. Succeeding generations of Britons have attributed the loss of the colonies to the mistakes and prejudices of a British ministry and not to racial enmity.

The revolution which brought the great republic into existence was lought in defense of rights and privileges which England herself had recognized for centuries, and the lesson of the struggle was not lost. Since that day the colonial policy of the mother country has undergone a com plete change. Self government has desire to undertake its manifold responsibilities have made themselves manifest. The birth of the American republic signalled the inauguration of a movement in behalf of civil liberty, so wide in its scope and so determined as to prove in the end absolutely irresistible. There is scarcely a nation in Europe but what has felt and responded to its influence. Where despotism formerly held sway representative governments are now in power, the influence of royalty having in most cases become merely

The Fourth of July has, therefore acquired a significance far greater than it originally possessed. As the day which usbered their country into existence it is a day which will always remain sacred in the minds and arts of the American people. But over and beyond that, it has a claim

London Standard

Based on Trade Relations.

The following interview appears in The London Standard of May 30 with Mr. John Charlton, M.P., who was spondent of that journal :-

Mr. John Charlton, M.P., a member of the Joint High Commission, who has had a seat in the Dominion on record for two years as being parliament since 1872, is recognized as one of the best informed men on this continent on the subject of When it is considered how great a Canada's trade relations with other volume of water is carried in the countries. For years he has worked Yukon, Klondike and other streams with energy and zeal to increase the contiguous to the mining districts it seems absurd that there should be United States. If no practical beneno system devised by which water in fits have followed, the fault is not Mr. Charlton's.

In view of the approaching conference between Imperial and colonial representatives in London, when the commercial relations of the colonies with the mother land will pass under review, Mr. Charlton was asked by your correspondent as to his views upon the question of preferential trade and Imperial defence. Mr. Charlton said that the feeling in Canada towards Great Britain was one of loyalty and affection. This did not arise from the enjoyment of trade advantages, for the position of Canada in the British markets was exactly the same as that of all other countries, and no preference whatever was given to her in the British tariff. While this was the case, Canada voluntarily gave a preference. of 33 1-3 per cent. to British imports, one result of which has been that the woollen industry of Canada has found the next duty sellected upon British imports totally insufficient for the purpose of protection. When the corn duties were recently imposed, amounting, as they did, to less than 5 per cent. er cent., Canadians anticipated that Canadian breadstuffs would be admitted free of duty in return for the large Canadian preference given to Great Britain, and much disappoint-Britain, was not given.

British goods into Canada free of duty could not be entertained. Canaduty could not be entertained. Canada could not dispense with the revenue, and the sacrifice of important manufacturing interests that had been fostered and built up under the policy adopted in 1878 could not be permitted.

As relatee to an arrang

As relatee to an arrangement by which Canada should bind herself to pay taxes, and furnish a quota of men for general Imperial purposes, Mr. Charlton did not believe that Canada could consent to such an arrangement, or could reasonably be asked to do so. The only possible war that would directly threaten her interests would be one with the United States, and if such a calamity were to come she would enter up-on a struggle that would tax her reurces to the utmost. With the military operations of Great Britain in the eastern hemisphere, Canada could have little interest. The aid she gave in South Africa was a matter of sentiment, for her trade with that continent was insignificant in amount, and her direct interest in the result trivial, except in so far as she was interested in preserving the prestige of the British Empire. Canada confronts problems that will require all the men and the money at her command. She preserve was a series of the livitation with pleasure. It was just a family dinner, and everything was passing off well when an unpleasant and quite unforeseen incident occurred. America. Her soil can support 100,-000,000 inhabitants. Into the great fields of her fertile northwest, where 300,000,000 acres of virgin wheat land is waiting for the settler, a great population will speedily enter, 200,000 are going in the present year and the human tide will increase in volume year by year. The transpor-tation facilities for the productions of the population now in that coun-try are insufficient. More railways must be built, and enormous demands will be made upon the resources of must be built, and enormous demands will be made upon the resources of Canada. She has already furnished the empire with an imperial highway across the continent, She can build up the empire and promote its in-

She is called upon to cope with a task greater than any that confronts the home government. She is a self-governing portion of the empire, and a self-reliant portion, fear of God. I look to all, priests or and while she will ever stand ready laymen, to help me uphold religion, among the people, in order that the which she forms a part, she will no doubt prefer to retain her autonomy to the full extent of the present time, and to act upon her own judgment as to what amount of aid in men and money may properly be required of her in each case when Great Britain meets the necessity for military or naval operations in defending her possessions or extending her conquests.
