A Trip to Coontown, as taken in by theatre goers at the Grand last evening, was all it was cracked up to be, and probably a little more. The singing of "Won t you come home, Bill medley of old southern airs, as sung by Miss Laura Walker. Miss Walker has a magnificent voice, clear as a bell, and of good power, besides, being well controlled. She had to respond to many encores. Sam Lucas played the old man, Silas Green, well, and W. Demount as Willie Wayside, did well. His singing of "Won't you omce home, Bill Bailey, took the house by storm, and and his encores were five in number. Miss Cassie Brown, the lady baritone had to respond to several encores. Her voice is a phenomenal one

The next attraction at the Grand is "When We were Twenty-one," which was so well received here some time

LYCEUM COURSE NO. 1. The Samuis Grand Concert Co., will fill the program on Tuesday evening, Nov. 4th, for the first number of the Lyceum Course.

The company consists of all artists such as Miss Sibyl Samuis, concert, oratorio and operatic sograno; Miss Helen Marie Burr, harpist; Mr. Edwin M. Shonert, America's greatest pianist, and Mr. George Deane, one of Boston's favorite tenors. The Grand should be well filled for the opening number of the course, on Tuesday evening, Nov. 4th and course book holders should feel grateful at having such a grand number on their list of attractions.

It is needless to say any more than is implied in the names of the artists, as they are well known to the music loving public of the world. The plan of seats opens at the Central drug store, Friday morning for the course book holders only. Monday, the plan opens to others.

A superb company of artists will be seen at Grand Opera House on Monday, Nov. 3rd, in the great Knickerbocker, theatre, New York, success, "When we were Twenty-one," which is udoubtedly the greatest play of modern times. The story briefly told is as follows :- Dick Carewe, a London barrister and his three comrades, the doctor, the soldier man and Waddles are bound together by the ties of lifelong friendship. Together they guard rear and protect the life of the "Imp." the only son of a dead comrade. The "Imp" is just twenty-one, and as wild as young men of that age generally are. He has married a woman much older than himself, who proves to be an adventuress of the worst type. Dick and his friends set about saving the Imp from the snare into which he has fallen and after many vicissitudes

"When we were Twenty-one" is a they succeed. love story, pure and simple and ib told in a straightforward, homely way. It is a story of how Dick Carewe and his comrades rear and guide the only son of a deceased chum; how they guard and save him from the pitfalls and snares that lie in the path of life at twenty-one. It is story of hearts bound together by ties of friendship that nothing can break, and of how the comrades save their ward from the results of his feelish imperuosity. It also tells how a great self-sacrificing for the girl he loves and who, he thinks, loves his ward. This play is undoubtedly the greatest of modern times and will be presented by a superb company of artists at the Grand on Monday evenings of the late late of

OUR NEIGHBOR'S CUCKOO CLOCK. Our neighbor has a cuckoo clock, Who lives across the way; It "cuckoos" through the lonely night,

And "cuckoos" through the day. It "cuckoos" loudly every hour, And then, O, fiendish luck! It opes the door upon the half And gives another "cuck."

A dozen meetings have been held, The landlord we have "seen" He won't eject the "cuckoo" man Because it would be mean. We've pleaded and begged and made our threats To all vacate the block, But still across the court resounds That doleful cuckoo clock.

Electric cars we do not mind, The fire gong stirs us not, The hawkers or the newsboys' cry We long ago forget. 'And e'en the cater waul's at night No longer stir the block, We have no ills of any kind Except that cuckoo clock.

O, in the peaceful far away, Where naught but angels sing; Where music only can be played Upon a silver string. No cuckoo clocks may enter in, We humbly beg and pray; And if we find one waiting there We'll go the other way.

HALF A MAN.

When a man is sick and can only work half the time he is practically half a man. It requires his whole physical energy to do half a man's work.

In general the weak run down condition which cuts the strength and energy in half is due to disease of the stomach and other organs of digestion and nutrition. You could not expect a half starved man to work more than half the time. The condition of the man with weak stomach is that of the half starved through lack of nutri-

There was an enthusiastic meeting of all the ratepayers of the drainage works and members of the Township Council on Monday evening. The ratepayers are dissatisfied with the council because the council had signed a contract for a new Park's pump. After a lengthy discussion it was decided to allow the council to go on with the work, although the ratepayers censured the council for their actions in not consulting the ratepayers before letting a contract.
