Miscellaneous.
The Opposition Policy.
The following resolution, which was moved in the House of Commons by Sir John Macdonald, represents the commercial policy of the Opposition—
"That this House is of opinion that the welfare of Canada requires the adoption of a national policy, which is to judiciously readjustment of the Tariff, will benefit and foster the Agricultural, the Mining, the Manufacturing and other interests of the Dominion; that the present Tariff will retain in Canada thousands of our fellow countrymen, now obliged to expatriate themselves in search of employment; that the Tariff, if it could be so arranged as to develop a protective industry, and to develop an active inter-provincial trade and moving (as it ought to do) in the direction of reciprocity, will be a benefit to our neighbors, as far as the varied interests of Canada may demand, will be a benefit to our country, and will be a benefit to the Empire."
Halifax Reporter.

The Financial Policy.
SENATOR MACPHERSON recently paid a visit to the St. Augustin district which he formerly represented in Parliament. He was everywhere received with the demonstrations of good will by the people. He was the recipient of several most complimentary addresses, and was greeted with bands of music and other tokens of popular favor. It will thus be seen that where he is best known he is highly appreciated.
The reception accorded to him by his constituents is a good certificate for those of the people of Canada who do not know him personally. The fact that Senator Brown and Premier Mackenzie are expected to go to Bruce for the purpose of encountering him, and if possible, "draw his fire" is of itself strong evidence that he is recognized as a more than ordinarily able exponent of public affairs.
In his reply to one of the addresses presented to him, "he strongly urged upon the young men to watch with special care the administration of the finances of the Dominion, no matter what Government might be in power." This has been his special forte in the Senate, and perhaps both from the intimate knowledge he has acquired of Dominion finances, and from the independent position he has ever taken in respect to political parties, there is no man in public life in the Dominion whose utterances ought to have more weight with the public than Senator Macpherson. In a speech which he delivered in the Senate just before Parliament was prorogued, he dwelt upon the state of the finances of the Dominion with even more than his usual vigor.
On that occasion he so fully exposed the fallacy of the Government supporters, who pointed to the Estimates as a proof that the Government were economically inclined—that that line of defence has been completely abandoned by the Government organs. He said the Estimates were merely an approximation to the probable expenditure. It ought to be a close approximation if the Government were really qualified to manage the finances of the country. Unfortunately for themselves and their argument, the Government had largely exceeded their estimate. For the financial year ended June 30th, 1877, the expenditure had exceeded the Estimate by no less a sum than $1,789,696. During the current year the expenditure had been more than double that sum, the Gov't thus largely over-stepping the authority to expend given them by Parliament. One way and another the Government in the session of 1877, underestimated the expenditure by no less a sum than $2,734,000.
Hon. Mr. Scott interrupted Senator Macpherson, trying to show he was wrong in his statement, but only succeeded in showing that Mr. Macpherson's view of the valueless character of the Estimates was the correct one. And Mr. Macpherson's conclusion was that "there is an absence of that regard for accuracy (on the part of the Government) which ought to characterize public men, and which, in former years, did characterize the public men of the country."
Mr. Macpherson, after demolishing the argument of the Government based upon the Estimates, pointed out the character of the legislation of the last five years. He said:
"We have come to the end of another session which has cost the country $500,000, and we have also come to the end of the Parliament which has cost the country $2,000,000, and I would ask hon. gentlemen to look back at the legislation of the past five years and to point to measures worth what they have cost—something that has been given to the people by Parliament in return for the confidence reposed in it, and the enormous cost of legislation."
"There is scarcely a bill worthy of Parliament, and yet three hundred gentlemen have been sitting here for three months at a cost to the country of at least $100,000. This last session is but one of fully equalled years of useful legislation. The promises were very great indeed, and the hopes of the country were high, but the result has been infinitesimal except in the broken promises of the Government and their supporters. This is lamentable."
In this conclusion public opinion concurs. There never has been in these promises a Government that promised so much and that performed so little and spent so much money performing that little.

And Mr. Macpherson's conclusion was that "there is an absence of that regard for accuracy (on the part of the Government) which ought to characterize public men, and which, in former years, did characterize the public men of the country."
Mr. Macpherson, after demolishing the argument of the Government based upon the Estimates, pointed out the character of the legislation of the last five years. He said:
"We have come to the end of another session which has cost the country $500,000, and we have also come to the end of the Parliament which has cost the country $2,000,000, and I would ask hon. gentlemen to look back at the legislation of the past five years and to point to measures worth what they have cost—something that has been given to the people by Parliament in return for the confidence reposed in it, and the enormous cost of legislation."
"There is scarcely a bill worthy of Parliament, and yet three hundred gentlemen have been sitting here for three months at a cost to the country of at least $100,000. This last session is but one of fully equalled years of useful legislation. The promises were very great indeed, and the hopes of the country were high, but the result has been infinitesimal except in the broken promises of the Government and their supporters. This is lamentable."
In this conclusion public opinion concurs. There never has been in these promises a Government that promised so much and that performed so little and spent so much money performing that little.

The Financial Policy.
SENATOR MACPHERSON recently paid a visit to the St. Augustin district which he formerly represented in Parliament. He was everywhere received with the demonstrations of good will by the people. He was the recipient of several most complimentary addresses, and was greeted with bands of music and other tokens of popular favor. It will thus be seen that where he is best known he is highly appreciated.
The reception accorded to him by his constituents is a good certificate for those of the people of Canada who do not know him personally. The fact that Senator Brown and Premier Mackenzie are expected to go to Bruce for the purpose of encountering him, and if possible, "draw his fire" is of itself strong evidence that he is recognized as a more than ordinarily able exponent of public affairs.
In his reply to one of the addresses presented to him, "he strongly urged upon the young men to watch with special care the administration of the finances of the Dominion, no matter what Government might be in power." This has been his special forte in the Senate, and perhaps both from the intimate knowledge he has acquired of Dominion finances, and from the independent position he has ever taken in respect to political parties, there is no man in public life in the Dominion whose utterances ought to have more weight with the public than Senator Macpherson. In a speech which he delivered in the Senate just before Parliament was prorogued, he dwelt upon the state of the finances of the Dominion with even more than his usual vigor.
On that occasion he so fully exposed the fallacy of the Government supporters, who pointed to the Estimates as a proof that the Government were economically inclined—that that line of defence has been completely abandoned by the Government organs. He said the Estimates were merely an approximation to the probable expenditure. It ought to be a close approximation if the Government were really qualified to manage the finances of the country. Unfortunately for themselves and their argument, the Government had largely exceeded their estimate. For the financial year ended June 30th, 1877, the expenditure had exceeded the Estimate by no less a sum than $1,789,696. During the current year the expenditure had been more than double that sum, the Gov't thus largely over-stepping the authority to expend given them by Parliament. One way and another the Government in the session of 1877, underestimated the expenditure by no less a sum than $2,734,000.
Hon. Mr. Scott interrupted Senator Macpherson, trying to show he was wrong in his statement, but only succeeded in showing that Mr. Macpherson's view of the valueless character of the Estimates was the correct one. And Mr. Macpherson's conclusion was that "there is an absence of that regard for accuracy (on the part of the Government) which ought to characterize public men, and which, in former years, did characterize the public men of the country."
