THE PLANETS.

It is pretty well understood that the perihelia of the four great planets—Jupiter, Uranus, Neptune and Saturn—will be coincident in 1880.

From 1880 to 1887 there will be one universal carnival of death. No place on earth will be entirely free from the plague. The Pacific coast will not suffer anything in comparison to any other portion of the globe.

Diseases will appear, the nature of which will baffle the skill of the most eminent physicians.

Every drop of water in the earth, on the earth and above the earth will be more or less poisonous. The atmosphere will be foul with noisome odours, and there will be few constitutions able to resist the coming scourge; therefore, prepare, ye that are constitutionally weak, and intemperate, and gluttonous, for "man's last home the grave."

From the far East the pestilential storm will sweep, and its last struggle will end in the far West.

All the weak and intemperate are sure to die. There is no escape from the inexorable plague fiend. Fortunate indeed are those whose blood is pure and free from taint or weakness, for they alone will survive the wreck of the human family.

The intemperate and weak will join hands and go down to their graves in tens of thousands.

Ancient races will be blotted from the face of the earth. Asia will be nearly depopulated, and the islands that border Asia will suffer frightfully from the scourge.

The countries that join the northern portion of Asia will suffer the ravages of the plague. Russia will be the first European nation that will suffer.

Unless correct sanitary measures are taken before 1880, the plague will be found devastating cities on the Atlantic coast of America.

America will lose more than fifteen millions of inhabitants if the sewers of her cities are as imperfect in 1887 as they are to-day.

[Then was betide Chatham with its noisome sinks.—Ed.]

WHAT TO EXPECT.

The perihelia will bring other afflictions upon the inhabitants of the earth, over which mankind can exert no restraining influence.

There will come storms and tidal waves that will swamp whole cities; earthquakes that will swallow mountains and towns, and tornadoes that will sweep hundreds of villages from the face of the earth; the geography of the earth will be changed by volcanic action; mountains will toss their rocky heads up through the oceanic valleys; valleys will appear where mountains stood; skillful navigators will be lost in the ocean, owing to the extraordinary variation of the compass; navigators will grow pale with alarm at the capricious defections of the needle; volcanoes that have been dormant for centuries will be awakened to belch forth their lava with more violence than when in their pristine vigor; rainfalls will deluge valleys, and mountain streams will enlarge their beds and become mighty torrents; fires will start spontaneously and devastate whole forests; great fires will occur in many cities, and some will be totally destroyed; there will be remarkable display of electricity, frightful to witness; wild beasts will leave their natural haunts and crowd into populous cities, timid and harmless; suffocating fumes of sulphur will escape from the earth to the great dread of many; an unprecedented number of ships will be shattered in fragments by running on mighty rocks and small islands that are not down on the navigators' charts; islands will appear and disappear without any apparent cause; the navigator's charts will prove almost a delirium instead of an aid, owing to the sudden changes of ocean currents, temperature and surroundings; the birds of the air, the beasts of the field, and even the fish in the sea, will be diseased; billions of fish will die and be cast upon the seashore, to fester in the sun and impregnate the atmosphere with their foul emanations. No fish nor animal food should be eaten from 1880 to 1885, for the fish of nearly all the animal kingdom and the finny tribes that inhabit the rivers, streams, lakes and ocean will be diseased, and therefore those who partake of the flesh shall poison their blood and be taken away shortly after.

FAMINE AND FARMERS.

Farmers will be so stricken with fear that they will cease to till their farms, and game famine will step in to make human misery more wretched; fanaticism will spring up in many places, and bloodshed will result therefrom; murderers and robbers will ply their hellish work with impunity, for there will be little or no law; everybody will be absorbed with the trying task of keeping alive; people will be buried in deep trenches, uncoffined; the judge will be stricken from the bench, the pleader at the bar. In seaboard towns thousands will be buried in the bays and harbors, the law to the contrary notwithstanding.

COUNTRIES DESERTED.

In many countries vast districts will be deserted. One may walk whole days over hundreds of farms without seeing a living thing. On all the large tracts of land that once were so animated with animal life, not a vestige will be seen. The houses on the deserted farms will tell of the hurried departure of the owners to the populous cities. Let a traveller persevere his way till he comes to the small villages, many of whom will not contain a single living thing. Let him look into the houses; let him pass through the doors that stand ajar and witness the sickening spectacle of whole families dead.

The poor will die by the tens of thousands, without a ministering hand to soothe their dying agonies. The doctors will be in universal demand. Bear in mind, no medicine or doctor can give you any more aid than you can yourself. The disease cannot be cured; but unless your system is too weak or impure, copious draughts of warm water and the vegetarian diet will prevent the disease poisoning the blood in the process of digestion.

Animal food will poison those who continue the use of it. Fine cotton or sponge, dipped into spirits of camphor and kept in the nostrils and frequently changed will prevent the blood from being poisoned through the organs of respiration.

After the black death there will be two years of fire, which will rage with fury in all parts of the world from 1885 to 1887. The fires will be the means of annihilating every germ of the disease. Nothing but fire can do it.

During the black death wonderful celestial phenomena will be seen. For weeks the sun will appear as red as blood, and terrific convulsions will appear in that great body. The sun will discharge oceans of flaming hydrogen gases, that will roll in tumultuous billows hundreds of thousands of miles from its centre. The moon's action on the tides will be spasmodic and irregular. Tremendous showers of meteors will fall to the earth and remain in an incandescent state for hours. Dense black clouds will veil the sun for days, and the moon will not shed as bright or as steady a light as before those dreadful days.

The whole heavens and earth will tremble at the awful and continuous reports of thunder—being frequently
