WE ARE IN THE Monumental Business

We devote all our time and energies to this line only. We employ tradesmen who thoroughly understand their business—some of them having served their time with the old reliable firm of Cairns & McLean. Proportion is one of the most particular branches of our trade; without it a Monument cannot look well. This is one of the places where some competitors are continually going astray. We do not import condemned stock full of cracks and stains because it is cheap, but we pay the right price and get the right goods.

THE BALANCE OF OUR STOCK WILL BE CLEARED OUT AT COST

To wind up the season's business and make room for our large Fall Stock for winter cutting. Come quick if you want a bargain. We don't advertise very much, but when we do we mean just what we say.

TOPICS OF THE DAY.

WIRELESS TELEGRAPHY.

The practicability of wireless telegraphy may be regarded as fairly demonstrated. The success of the experiments during the British naval maneuvers was followed by an order for its adoption by the admiralty. And now the U. S. navy department has reopened negotiations with Marconi. A year ago the officers detailed to examine the system reported favorably upon it, but as ten thousand dollars was asked for the right to use the invention and ten thousand dollars more was demanded for each complete outfit, the effort to secure it was abandoned. It is now reported that the British Admiralty pays only one thousand dollars for this electrical equipment.

One of its latest uses, says the New York Herald, was in connection with the stranding of the Russian coast defense ship General Admiral Apraxine. This vessel struck last winter on the rocks off Hobbland, in the Gulf of Finland. To make her salvage possible communication was established with the mainland and with the ice breaking steamer Ermack. Wires, transmitters and coherers were erected on the island of Hobbland and on a small island near Kotka, the distance being thirty-three miles between termini. The apparatus worked perfectly for a period of eighty-four days, and four hundred and forty official messages were despatched and received. A curious feature is that the system worked better in a heavy snowstorm than in fine weather. Our offices also reported that wind, fog, rain, darkness and speed did not affect the transmission through space. Marconi declares that the difficulty of concentrating the signals and of cutting out contiguous stations has been overcome. Last April serial telegrams were sent from the French despatch boat This direct to the South Foreland, despite the fact that the East Goodwin lightship had an installation within the radius for which the messages were intended. If further experiments confirm this possibility of concentration and show that signals can be sent for distances exceeding one hundred miles the success of wireless telegraphy must be regarded as assured.

THE JUDGE'S MOTHER

Mrs. Smith had a paper to write for her club. The subject she had chosen was, "How can women uplift the coming generation?" She was puzzled to choose the best of the many ways which suggested themselves to her. Should it be thought art, lecturing, literature or general reform? She considered her difficulty to old Judge Adams, who was sitting with her husband on the veranda.

"I can only give you my experience," he said. "I was one of five brothers. All were men who exercised a strong influence in the world, and each one of us owed his bent and force of character to our mother. Our father died when we were children. Mother made us what we were. Until we were gray-haired men we went to her whenever we were in perplexity. 'Mother,' we would say, 'what is the right thing to do in this case?' She knew nothing of law or politics, but she always knew the right. 'I think,' said the judge, gravely, 'that my mother influenced the next generation to her own more strongly than any other human being I have ever known.'"

"She no doubt had a powerful mind and a broad education?" asked Mrs. Smith. "No." The judge smiled. "She got her hold on us in very simple ways. I remember one of them. When we came home from school on cold days, mother was sure to be waiting beside a big fire. Off came our wet shoes and stockings; she rubbed the cold feet warm with her own hands. Then there was always a huge brown jug waiting before the fire, with roasted apples and sugar and hot water in it, and each one of us had his mug of the delicious stuff; and then we sat and grew warm, and joked and laughed, and no doubt opened our hearts to the dear, wise woman. "All day long she was our comrade. We carried to her all our secrets and miseries when we were boys, as we had done when we were men, as we had done when we were boys. Two of us were ministers, two legislators who helped to form the laws of new states, but I doubt if one of us ever took an important step in life without being influenced by the opinion of that good woman." Mrs. Smith looked uncertainly at her paper on which she had scribbled "artist," lecturers, civil and political reformers."

"You think, then," she said, "that woman's strongest hold upon the world is at home, through love and a Christian life?"
The judge's eyes twinkled. "I can only tell you what I know. I cannot decide for the world," he said. —Youth's Companion.

A CASE OF RESTITUTION.

A parish priest in another country sends us the following narrative, the publication of which will emphasize the importance of restitution in cases when another had been robbed of his good name. The obligation of making amends as far as possible when one's neighbor has been left thus poor is frequently lost sight of; and the too common practice of gliding over the sin by confessing "uncharitable conversation" often misleads the confessor as to his duty.
Mrs. G— was a lady of position. Among her domestics were two maids whose mother was lodge-keeper. On all three the lady had the utmost reliance, and felt the highest respect for their character. And the confidence was well deserved. The greatest devotion was manifested to the lady's interests, her servants being devoted to her young children, and showing all manner of loyalty to herself.
A man who had previously been in the lady's employment came to her on one occasion with a report against the widow and her daughters. It was more than he could bear, he declared, to see what was being done behind the lady's back, and he could hold silence no longer. He then gave a detailed account of certain articles that were stolen, naming the days when the thefts were committed and the means employed by the culprit.

The lady knew this person to be attentive to his religion; she was not aware of any ill-will existing between him and the widow and her daughters; and on the other hand, having known these servants for a long time, she could not believe anything wrong of them. So she replied, promptly and straightforwardly, that she did not credit what had been told her. "At the same time I must confess I was staggered," she said to me; "though I could not and I would not believe it."

Interesting Happenings The World Over.

The disfranchisement of the Negro in North Carolina may be viewed from many standpoints. Theoretically, it is a clear violation of the spirit of the Constitution; practically, it is a declaration from the people of North Carolina that the son of the bondswoman must not be heir with the son of the free. But it may also be regarded as an argument for letting the Filipinos go their way. With one race problem tormenting the public mind, there ought in all reason to be some prudent hesitation about taking on another race problem. The Spaniards—as history shows—could have done this work incomparably better. They did it in Mexico, where the Indians were benevolently assimilated, not annihilated; and they did it in Cuba, where the color of a man's cuticle is little considered. Our government has failed to civilize and assimilate the inferior races chiefly because it is forced to ignore religion—the great civilizer—in its schools. And of the Tagalo we may say what a clever writer said of the Hakkas: "The book education offered to him by a paternal government is as unsuited to him as that other paternal system which teaches the red Indian girl to play Perceval de Sar's tunes on the piano, and then sends her back to adorn the wigwam of a husband with three wives who must cultivate the soil for their lord and master." —Ave Maria.

Ever since King Humbert's murder, which they were unable to prevent, the Italian police functionaries have completely lost their heads and see an Anarchist in every unoffending citizen they meet. Hundreds of people have been arrested on the charge of approval of Bresci's crime, and sentenced to terms of imprisonment varying from ten months to three years and fines of from £2 to £80. One of the most scandalous cases occurred near Rome the other day, when the gendarmes arrested the parish priest of St. Sebastian on the Appian Way, Father Volponi, O. F. M., a venerable old man of over 70, who has actually been sentenced to eight months' imprisonment and a fine of £40 for the usual crime, of which he professed himself quite innocent. Indeed, among the witnesses for the defense there appeared two gendarmes who deposed that they had often heard Father Volponi emphatically condemn the murder. But it was all useless, and the poor old priest was dragged to prison head outflung like a common felon.

The Western Watchman has this thought: "We know all about cyclones and tidal waves and can explain their origin and properties without allowing any place for divine intervention; but a calamity like that of Galveston tells the world more forcibly than ten thousand words that 'man is dust' that 'God is great'; that His name is 'holy and terrible,' and that His power is to the ends of the earth."

"Deride Not Any Man's Infirmities."

Tell him, rather, how to get rid of them. Most infirmities come from bad blood and are cured by Hood's Sarsaparilla. Every person who has scrofula, salt rheum, humors, catarrh, dyspepsia or rheumatism should at once begin taking this medicine that the infirmity may be removed. Weakness—"I have given Hood's Sarsaparilla to my boy whose blood was poor. He was very weak, could not keep warm, and suffered from pains in his stomach. Hood's Sarsaparilla made him strong and well." Mrs. W. C. Stratton, Thomas St., Deseronto, Ont.
