TEAS!

Did you ever consider the advantage of buying your TEAS from us? It will pay you, as we can give better values than up-town stores. Why?

Because

Our buying facilities are unequalled, our expenses are less, and we give you the advantage of this in quality. Our reputation for Good Teas is now established, and we guard it jealously.

We are to-day the acknowledged leaders in the Tea Trade.

Cantankerous Obstinate Watches.

If you are the owner of a cantankerous, obstinate Watch, that utterly refuses to behave itself decently and tell time correctly, why not bring it to the and let our expert repairers diagnose its case? An erratic unreliable Watch is little better than no Watch at all. The longer you allow it to misbehave the more difficult the repairer's task will be in the end and the greater the cost of repair. Putting off the fixing of a Watch or Clock that has gotten out of order is a losing and shortsighted policy. Has this any home application to any of your timepieces? If so our Repair Department is ready and waiting.

HEARTS APART.

To count the days until we twain May read each other's eyes again And dwell once more in Arcady, Is all my joy away from thee— Is all my joy and all my pain.

When leaden-footed minutes wane To hours that burden heart and brain, 'Twere but a useless agony

To count the days, Did thy most gracious heart not deign To bid my own heart entertain The hope of better things to be; Did I not know thy constancy And that, until we meet again, Two count the days, T. A. D.

At a large emporium in Brooklyn a rather antiquated dame was requested, upon entering, to "Walk this way, ma'am" by an affable but very bow-legged floorwalker. The old dame looked at the bent-legged floorwalker in astonishment, and said:—

"Why bless me, my man, I couldn't walk that way if you was to give me the whole shop!"

Clears Away Worms

Mrs. Wm. Graham, Sheppardton, Ont., writes: I have given Dr. Lows Worm Syrup to my boy time and again and find it a good worm medicine. It is nice to take and never makes the children sick like powders." Price 25c.

It happened in a little church where the motive-power for the organ comes from the strong arms of an industrious villager.

At a recent service the choir got into trouble and, while confusion reigned, the organ suddenly stopped. The situation was not relieved when a hoarse voice came from behind the organ and floated out into the auditorium.

It said: "Sing like thunder, me boys! The bellows is busted!"

There is nothing better for children's Coughs and Colds than Dr. Wood's Norway Pine Syrup. It is very pleasant to take and always cures the little one's cough promptly.

St. Martin, Que., May 16, 1895. C. O. RICHARDS & CO.

Gentlemen,—Last November my child stuck a nail in his knee causing inflammation so severe that I was advised to take him to Montreal and have the limb amputated to save his life.

A neighbor advised us to try MINARD'S LINIMENT, which we did, and within three days my child was all right, and I feel so grateful that I send you this testimonial, that my experience may be of benefit to others. LOUIS GAGNIER.

JUST A COLD

SETTLED IN THE KIDNEYS,

BUT IT TURNED TO DROPSY.

IT WAS CURED BY

DOAN'S KIDNEY PILLS.

Read of This Wonderful Cure.

It May Do You or Your Friends Some Good to Know About It.

Miss Agnes Creelman, Upper Smithfield, N.S., writes:—About 18 months ago I caught cold. It settled in my kidneys, and finally turned into Dropsy. My face, limbs, and feet were very much bloated, and if I pressed my finger on them it would make a white impression that would last fully a minute before the flesh regained its natural color. I was advised to try DOAN'S KIDNEY PILLS, and before I had used half a box I could notice an improvement, and the one box completely cured me. I have never been troubled with it since, thanks to DOAN'S KIDNEY PILLS. Price 50c. per box, or 3 boxes for $1.25; all dealers, or The Doan Kidney Pill Co., Toronto, Ont.

Items of Interest.

The newly elected municipality of Toulon have forbidden the Little Sisters of the Poor to solicit alms from door to door in that city.

Father Marianus Holguin, general superior of the Franciscans, has been appointed Bishop of Huarez in Peru. He is a native of that country.

A decision was given the other day by the Irish Court of Appeal reversing the decision of Judge Barton providing for the training in the Catholic religion of the children of a man named O'Neill, a Catholic, who had gone to America and had left his wife, a convert who reverted to Protestantism after his departure, the care of the children. Judgment was given by four Appeal judges, not one of whom is a Catholic.

On a recent Saturday, in the Church of St. John Lateran, Rome, the following former Anglican clergymen were admitted to sacred orders: Rev. W. W. Hume, late of St. Michael's, Shoreditch, London, and Rev. C. F. Norgate, formerly Anglican curate of St. John's Sutton-on-Flynn; Rev. E. R. Grimes, formerly of the "Cowley Fathers"; Rev. W. H. Drage, formerly curate of All Saints, Plymouth; Rev. H. M. M. M. Evans, formerly vicar of St. Michael's Shoreditch, London.

St. Beda's College in Rome is mainly for English converts who wish to study for the priesthood, and it is one of the late foundations of Pope Leo XIII., of blessed memory. Last year it had sixteen students, all but one of whom were converts. Seven of them had formerly been Anglican clergymen. The Beda College is connected with the English College.

In many of the comments upon the results of the Belgian elections it has been assumed that the Catholics have suffered something of a check. In reality they have strengthened their position. For this reason—that though they have lost a few seats, their total poll has been higher than it was in 1900 and the true losers have been their only formidable opponents, the Socialists. The Liberals have had some gains, but at the expense of the Socialists, who have come out of political fray with seven seats less than they had when they entered it. There has been a considerable falling off in the Socialist vote almost in every district.

As a red rag will infuriate a bull, so anything colored with religion maddens a French radical, observe the "London Catholic Times." In 1873 France, still chastened by the scourge of war, had solemnly consecrated herself, amid the joy of the people, to the Sacred Heart. This act of consecration still adorns the statute book, and consequently is an offense in the eyes of anti-clerical legislators. So M. Djeanté asks the House to abrogate the law, and M. Valle, Minister of Justice, horrified at the memory of his country's piety, claims urgency for the motion, and succeeds in getting the proposal sent to the committee now sitting for the purpose of drawing up terms to govern the separation of Church and State. While the Radicals in the Chamber win this victory, the Senate is gravely discussing the removal of the crucifix from the law courts. It heard evidence from several competent quarters and then, of course, accepted the governments' order of the day. So things continue in France. Every week sees some act of irreligious persecution consummated, to the horror and disgust of the Catholics, who weep and wail and do nothing else!

A memorable audience was the recently granted by Pope Pius X., to the artists' society of Rome known as "La Corporazione Artistica Romana." Christian artists have ever found their most powerful protection and stimulus in the Papal palace, and the meeting between Pius X., and the artists' society must have brought to the minds of those present scenes which Roman Pontiffs played a similar part. The Holy Father spoke to them in tones full of kindness and encouragement. He dwelt on the immense patience of the old master. "The feverishness of our times," said his Holiness, "is unfavorable to artistic perfection. Work is done with all possible haste and orders are given which place the highest excellence out of the question." His Holiness in this connection referred to the beauties of the Venetian palaces, and Professor Seitz remarked that there is no artist of our day who could produce equal work. The Pontiff accepted an address which was presented by Professor Seitz, as well as a book on the laws of form tendered by Professor Boehnek, and familiarly patted Professor Gerhardt on the back when he learned that he had been busy for sixty years in Rome as an artist.

Laymen and the Church.

(True Witness.)

The question of the status, the rights and privileges of Catholic laymen in the affairs of the Church is one that affects every diocese, every parish, every family. The priesthood is the administrative body of the Church, established to carry on the work of Christ; created to administer the Sacraments and spread the truth. But, if there were no faithful to receive the Sacraments, the priesthood would be simply for itself. But Our Lord instituted the Sacraments and the priesthood for the people. Consequently the layman has his important place and important functions in the Church. Rarely have we ever found this subject more clearly, concisely and logically treated than in a letter signed by the Most Rev. John J. Glennon, and published in a Catholic Exchange. After showing how the Church always invites to co-operation and the activity of the lay element, Mgr. Glennon makes an appeal to history. It is this part of his letter that so impresses us, that we will give it in full.

"When days of trouble came to the Church, when men strong and devoted were needed to protect Christendom from the savages of the north and the Mohammedans of the east, it was to the Catholic layman that the Church turned for her defence. That very tomb that was offered by a layman as a resting place for the Saviour in the long ago, became during these ages an inspiration to the Catholic laymen of the west to go forth and rescue it from the hands of the Saracens. Hence, we see that gallant band unite with all the fervor of religious consecration, and with all the valor of the knights of old, to go forth to battle for the Cross, bearing on their breasts the red cross of the Crusaders, and beneath these crosses hearts as brave as ever beat in the history of humanity. I need mention only Tancred, Godfrey of Bouillon, or our own glorious St. Louis, to bring to your minds what in days of old, the knights did for religion and humanity. These were laymen, and they were the real defenders of Christendom. And when the tide finally changed, when the last strand had been made for Christian or Saracen dominion, was it not with the sword of that grand Polish leader, John Sobieski, that the Turks met their final defeat?"

"If the Church had no use for the Catholic layman, what think you would be her idea of Sir Thomas More, who appeared almost to stand alone to brave and answer the passion of a tyrant king, and who resigned all rather than betray his faith. Even the last century witness the re-emergence of Catholic faith in France, under the guise of Chateaubriand and Count de Maistre and the emancipation of Catholic people under the great laymen and leaders, O'Connell and Windorst. "Just as in the days of the past as to day we need strong men and true, the stronger and truer from the very strength of the temptations that beset them. These temptations arise from political, commercial and social conditions, which have become in these days so complicated that old principles of honesty, fair play and equal rights appear to be fast disappearing, leaving only the principles that they who succeed, no matter what the manner of their success, shall be assigned to oblivion and decay. When you are told that it matters not the means you employ, what the shrewdness of the plot, or the secrecy of the execution, if you merge therefrom rich and successful; that it is not the world's intention to reason why, but to crown you with success; indeed it looks as if there were almost a bribe given to dishonesty, deceit and fraud.

"We need men who will withstand the temptations, who will die rather than betray the trust their manhood and their God imposed on them; who realize that it is only noble to be good; that to live pure; speak true, right wrong, and to follow the King even though that should mean crucifixion and the grave. This, after all, is the duty to be done by those who realize their Christian faith and place it before the world, as Christ expected his followers should do."

Soldier's Decorate a Nun's Grave.

The Buffalo Catholic Union and Times, contains the following clipping from the Cincinnati Post, relating a pleasing Memorial Day event:—

"The grave of Sister Anthony, one of the women who went to the aid of the soldiers at the battle of Pittsburg Landing, was decorated by a body of veterans Monday. The old soldiers marched to the famous nun's grave, at the motherhouse of the Sisters of Charity, back of Price Hill, where services were held, in addition to the decoration of the grave. Sister Anthony commended a boat which went to the rescue of the wounded soldiers, and went among the dead and dying, directing the rescue of the wounded, and whom she placed aboard the boat and taken to Cincinnati for treatment. Sister Anthony's grave is decorated yearly by the surviving veterans."

This clipping was accompanied by the following self-explanatory note from a buffalo business man:—

"Cincinnati, O., May 30.

"Dear Mr. Rambler—I was present today at the cemetery here, and of all the ceremonies, that at the grave of a Sister of Charity, Sister Anthony, to my mind seemed the most impressive. A Protestant minister, Rev. Watson W. Tranter, knelt and prayed on the grave of a Catholic nun, whose whole life was that of a saint, devoted to the suffering, an angel on earth, followed by an oration by General Michael Ryan. Thousands listened, their heads bared, tears on every face.

"I don't blame the Catholic Church for having saints. A few of those saints might not hurt the Protestant Church and might fill some wants.

"Sincerely and fraternally,
"Victor R. Blebbon."

A Catholic Page in Japanese History.

Whatever way our sympathies may lie, it is certain that anything relating to the Church in Japan or Russia, past or present, has today for Catholic readers a more than passing interest. The story of Catholic missions in Japan is a sad yet glorious recital. About the end of the sixteenth century a great number of Japanese had become Catholics, but the Government took alarm at the progress of the faith, and a bitter persecution wiped out all the outward traces of Christianity. Before this persecution the Church was making great strides among the people; and A. M. Knapp in his work "Feudal and Modern Japan" gives the following interesting account of a Japanese embassy to Rome in those days:—

"A little more than 300 years ago the city of Rome was the strangest sight which even her streets, trodden by pilgrims from all the corners of the earth, have ever witnessed. Guarded by the cavalry and Swiss Guards, accompanied by the foreign embassies, and the Roman princes and nobility, with the officials of the Cardinals and of the Vatican company of Japanese ambassadors, themselves of princely birth, were conducted into the presence of the Pontiff. The vast crowds thronging the streets and filling the windows looked on in almost breathless silence as the strange visitors, in their splendid embroidered robes, and wearing in their girdles two swords, the symbols of Japanese gentility passed onward to the Hall of Audience. Reaching the castle joined with those of the Vatican in welcoming the ambassadors. Unhindered into the presence of the Pontiff the Japanese approached the Papal throne with their credentials. Prostrating themselves at the Pope's feet, they declared that they had come from the extremities of the East to acknowledge, in the presence of the Pope, the Vicar of Jesus; and to render obedience to him in the name of the princes of whom they were the envoys."

"The appearance of the young men, described by the chronicler as 'modest and amiable, yet with a conscious sentiment and nobility,' together with the extraordinary character of their message, drew tears and sobs from the greater part of the audience. The Pope himself, greatly agitated, hastened to raise them up, and kissed their foreheads."—Sacred Heart Review.
