

Garrulous.

(From Public Opinion.)
The reason given by Wundt, why some men do not talk, is because they have nothing to say. Sir Richard, however, has been doing some talking over talkative gentlemen had the wisdom of animals how silent they might be.

Arson Trial Concluded.

COURT TAKES TIME TO CONSIDER

Following the conclusion of the trial of Joseph Burnstein for arson on Tuesday afternoon, Judge Morris indicated that he would take time to consider his verdict. There was a dramatic moment during Tuesday's hearing, when the Judge informed counsel that he would not accept the plea of his son-in-law in the case of the evidence for the crown. Burnstein conducted his own defence. Henry Galpert was the first witness for the defence. He stated that he left Burnstein in the shop at 10.30 p.m., on the night of the fire. It is not unusual for accused to leave the shop at 11.30 p.m. Another witness saw all the lights out in Burnstein's shop at 10.30 p.m. Charles Burnstein, son of the accused, said he left the shop with his father before 11 o'clock. He had to deliver a parcel, and arrived home after 11.30, and found his father having supper. Twenty minutes later a constable called to inform accused that his house was on fire. Under cross examination, witness failed to corroborate his own story.

Following a cross firing with the Inspector General of Police, Burnstein addressed the Court on his own behalf, complaining that he was a martyr, and was the victim of jealousy. He went so far as to complain that he had been ruined by the people next door. H. A. Winter, B.A., for the Crown said the evidence of witnesses with respect to the time Burnstein had been seen leaving the store, and the peculiar nature of the fire itself looked suspicious while Burnstein's own statements were contradictory. He thought the evidence for the prosecution was incontrovertible. He declared that he could not accept the defence and would deliver judgment later.
