Fees Moderate. They were all dispatched to the nursery to play, on you force those nice children of yours to drink water? began Mrs. Serie, turning to her suest. "Do you do it upon principle? as people say." I'do it because I believe it to be good for them," was Mrs. Danesbury's answer. "But you cannot possibly think that the small portion of beer and wine which our children have just taken can have done them any harm?"

"Oh, water for me, if you please," said the child.

"Water, sir?"

"Yes," replied Arthur; "and for my sister also. We always drink water."

There was no water on the sideboard; it was a beverage not often called for at Mr. Serle's, and one of the servants had to go downstairs for some. Matthew and Charlotte Serie had each their small silver mug of porter.

"Your children are not going to drink water? "Sociaimed Mrs. Serle, when she saw the water placed for them. This cannot thurt hem, Mrs. Danesbury, it is only parter, not stout."

"Thank yeu." replied Mrs. Danesbury, "You have replaced for them. This cannot thurt hem, Mrs. Danesbury, it is only parter, not stout."

"Your children are not going to drink water? "Condn't know what's good for them, I see," interposed Mr. Serle. But the subject dropped, to be resumed, however, at dessert. It pouring classes three parts full, and placed hom to the children.
