Ever Young and Ever Fair.

[From the Davenport Democrat.] The preservation of female beauty and its enchantments by the use of harmless cosmetics are duties the ladies owe to themselves, and to those who value their personal charms as they appreciate their moral qualities.
Unfortunately unprincipled parties too frequently take advantage of the natural desire to be ever young and ever fair, and palm upon the market deteriorated acid and mineral poisons which give a momentary luster at the risk of future sallowness and ruined health. In the Oriental Cream, prepared by Dr. T. Felix Gouraud, of New York city, the ladies have a harmless preparation for preserving the delicacy of the complexion and obliterating blemishes, which has become the favorite toilet article of the leading professional artists, which owe so much of their popularity to their personal charms. Securely a star dressing-room in opera or theater throughout our land is without the Oriental Cream.
It stands today the most harmless and perfect beautifier known.There's beauty and utility in Sound were accompanied to London by Prof.

Greenwood, a member of the college staff. On Saturday morning, while at breakfast, Miss Fawcett complained of a headache, but shortly afterwards was in her usual good spirits. A few moments subsequently she was seized with a sudden faintness, and said that she must sit down. She died almost immediately. On Tuesday afternoon the funeral will take place to Askin Street Methodist Church, where services will be held. Interment will be

A REVOLVERTeamster Granger Tries to Put an End to a Quarrel.And Is Struck Over the Eye—Went to Summon the Police and Two Shots Were Fired at Him—His Assailant Escaped.The residents in the vicinity of the White Ox Inn, on the Hamilton road, were thrown into great excitement on Saturday night about 8:30 o'clock, when two revolver shots were fired, and it was rumored that a man had been killed. A large crowd gathered and the police were summoned. Detectives Nickle and Egerton were soon on the scene, and after an investigation found that the man who had been killed was a teamster named Granger.
On Saturday night two men, who go through the country buying eggs and butter and all kinds of produce, were boarded at the house, and got into an altercation. The man who was killed became so loud that a teamster named Granger, who was also an occupant of the house, entered their room to restore order. He found one of the men, named McWilliams, or Williams, with a Colt revolver in each hand. Granger was struck over the eye with the butt of one of the revolvers before he had a chance to make a move. A second blow was aimed at his head, which he escaped. He then left the room, threatening to go for the police, and as he went down the roadway McWilliams fired two shots from one of the revolvers. Neither shot struck Granger.
McWilliams disappeared immediately after the shooting, and has not been seen since. The men are said to have been pretty well under the influence of liquor when they were wrangling.The White Ox Inn is an old frame structure, which for many years was

ACCUSED OF MURDERING
HIS MOTHERMrs. Mary Cavanagh. Aged 75 Years, the Victim.Body Found Early Sunday Morning In a Pool of Blood.Had Been Alone in the House With Her Drunken Son.Circumstances All Point to An Atrocious and Revolting Crime.Cavanagh Made No Effort to Escape, and Has Made No Statement Since His Arrest—The Weapon Not Found.At an early hour yesterday morning John Cavanagh was placed in jail, charged with the crime of killing his widowed mother. The alleged murder was committed about an hour before the man's arrest, which took place at 2:10 a.m.Mrs. Mary Cavanagh, the victim, was 73 years old. The alleged murderer gave his age to the police as 53, but he is not supposed to be over 50. He had been drinking Saturday evening, and the theory that the police have for the crime is that he went home at a late hour for money with which to buy more liquor. Meeting with a refusal, he is supposed to have attacked his mother, and in a frenzy inflicted wounds which caused her death.The scene of the tragedy was a little frame cottage at the southeast corner of Philip and Matland streets, near the London and Port Stanley Railway bridge. For some years past John Cavanagh and his mother have lived there together, and so far as the neighbors were aware, happily. The house was kept surprisingly neat and tidy, and was comfortably furnished. Mrs. Cavanagh, who died three years ago, was a laborer, and bore the reputation of being a steady worker.The room in which Mrs. Cavanagh met her death is at the rear of the house, and was a bedroom, and the bed alone filled the room. She was found lying on the floor, face downward, her body on the right side, an arm extended to the left. A terrible gash opened her left nostril from the eye to the tip of the nose, and from this wound a great quantity of blood had flowed. There were some bruises on the side, and the nightdress worn by the deceased was considerably torn.
The bedclothes showed no sign of a struggle, although Mrs. Cavanagh had evidently been in bed.

A TELEPHONE MESSAGE.

The police first learned of the murder a few minutes before 2 o'clock Sunday morning by a telephone message from John Harris, a colored man, living near the Cavanaghs. Sergt. Morgan dispatched P. C. Nelson Smith in the patrol, and en route Sergt. Crawford was called up.Cavanagh was drunk when the police arrived on the scene. He was sitting on an old chair in the kitchen, adjoining the bedroom where lay his mother's corpse. He said nothing to the police, but nodded his head toward the bedroom, when P. C. Smith asked him where his mother was. P. C.
Smith carried a small lamp into the room, and the ghastly scene was revealed. The body was covered with a quilt, and in answer to questions, the prisoner said he had placed it there.
The woman had apparently been dead an hour and a half or two hours.Cavanagh at first said she had been dead twenty minutes, and a few minutes later said she had been dead an hour. There was a great quantity of blood on the floor near the body, though apparently an attempt had been made to mop it up. On the floor of the sitting-room and of the kitchen were blood stains leading to the kitchen door. A basinful of blood and water had apparently been emptied on the ground outside the kitchen door.
A basin of water and a couple of cloths saturated in blood were found on a bench in the kitchen.

THE NEIGHBORS' STORY.

The story related by the Harris family, neighbors of the Cavanaghs, is to the effect that the prisoner went to the house of James Harris about 1:30 o'clock. He aroused Harris and told him that his mother had fallen out of bed and hurt herself. The two men then returned to the Cavanagh home, and Harris went to the room to which he was directed by Cavanagh.
The sight that met his eyes was appalling. Beside the bed, with her head lying in a pool of blood, lay the half-naked body of the dead woman. Harris left Cavanagh and went to his brother John's and told him of what he had seen. The latter went at once to the hospital and telephoned for the police.

THE CORONER NOTIFIED

At 3 o'clock in the morning, the police notified Coroner Dr. Piper, who went to the house at once. He was told what was known of the affair, and at once ordered an inquest. The jury was empaneled Sunday morning. The jurors are: J. C. Brady (foreman) Wm.
Stein, H. P. Carmichael, Francis Fried, J. M. Wardell, Henry Powell, R. J. Wood, Cornelius Cotter, Thomas son's morgue, to which it had been

THE WEAPON NOT FOUND.

Nearly all of Sunday was spent by the detectives in a search for the knife or razor with which it was supposed that his crime was committed. The search was unsuccessful. A freshly-dug spot was discovered in the garden, and was upturned with no result.About 9:30 in the evening Cavanagh went to Harris' house, and was there considerably under the influence of liquor. Previous to this he had been up town, and had procured some whisky. On leaving Harris' he said he was going home to get some more money.
He was not seen again by anybody, as far as known, until he rapped at Harris' door and informed the latter that his mother had fallen out of bed and had hurt herself.A purse containing $7 or $8 was found hidden away in the house by the police, and the officers think that Cavanagh, when refused more money by his mother, had, while enraged, struck her. On learning that Harris had telephoned for the patrol wagon, Cavanagh is said to have become very angry, and

THREATENED TO SHOOT

Harris if he caught him. Before the police arrived Cavanagh left the house and walked a couple of blocks up the street, but returned a little later.Cavanagh was very drunk when arrested. He accepted the situation in a matter-of-fact way, and made no resistance. He asked at the police station why he had been taken there, and said nothing when informed that he was charged with murder. While at the house he told P. C. Smith that there was no one else in the house during the night but himself and his mother.

NOTHING TO SAY.

Yesterday he had sobered up to some extent, and was removed to the county jail from the police cells. He said absolutely nothing in regard to the tragedy or his situation.

CAVANAGH'S RECORD.

John Cavanagh has been a lifelong resident of the city, and is well known to the police through his indulgence in liquor, but has not been considered vicious. He had not a reputation of molesting people when in liquor. About 25 years ago he was reported for beating his wife, but escaped arrest by jumping from a second-story window.
He had also been before the police magistrate on charges of drunkenness and disorderly conduct, and once on the charge of highway robbery. But this all happened many years ago. His name had not been on the police court blotter for a long time, and so far as the police knew his record was clear for several years past.Coroner Piper would make no statement as to the cause of death until after the post-mortem. He was aware that Mrs. Cavanagh suffered from heart trouble. He said, however, that the wound on the face could not have been caused by falling out of bed.

CHARGED WITH MURDER.

The crowd at the police court this morning was the largest for a considerable time, no doubt attracted by the fact that Cavanagh would appear before the magistrate. The prisoner was charged with murder, but said nothing. He looked at his worship in a dazed fashion. He did not appear to realize his awful position, and looked as if the effects of his spree had not entirely left him. J. M. McEvoy, of the law firm of Dignan & McEvoy, is defending the prisoner. He raised strong objection to the fact that he was refused the privilege of seeing Cavanagh yesterday. It was a right that every counsel and prisoner were entitled to.

THE POST-MORTEM.

A post-mortem examination of the body was held at Stevenson's undertaking rooms this morning. Drs.
Teasdale and Neu conducted the post-mortem, and Dr. McCallum was present in the interest of the prisoner. No marks whatever were found upon the woman's body other than those upon her head. A long, sharp wound extended from the inner side of the left eye down around the nose. This was probably caused by some keen-edged instrument. The nose was cut, but eyes were black, and there were cuts about the mouth. There were no external marks, except on the head and face.
