In fact, it appeared to be the idea of the aldermen as heavily as will the company. that only athletes live in London, and that such a place as a park, where wo-men and children and the aged, as well as those who enjoy a quiet moment, is not needed in the slightest. And one alderman went so far as to say that if he had his way he would kick every flower and shrub out of Victoria Park and turn it into a playground! It would appear from all this that the young men's vote is regarded as being well worth the while of looking after by the aldermen, and that a new section to cater to has developed in municipal circles in London. It is said that if the idea of purchasing land for parks is taken up seriously the council may appoint a parks as may be deemed necessary for park

The statement of Ald.
