Track Confab Brings Up Big Toronto School Meet.

A pre-organization meeting of Central Collegiate track enthusiasts was held yesterday afternoon, when it was decided that fall training would be begun on Tuesday, September 11.

One of the important items brought up was the matter of sending a representative Central Collegiate team to compete in the Ontario inter-scholastic championships, which will be held in Toronto on September 29, under the auspices of the Sportsmen's Patriotic Association. Nothing definite was done in this regard, although the entry of the team is practically assured.

Optimism was evident on every hand, and with several of last year's track stars back again and new men coming out, it was felt that the Central Collegiate Institute would gain new laurels during the 1923-24 track season. Last year's available men back this year are: Wanless, Weston, Wilson, Wright, Hunter and Burns.

The Mint League closed for the season in London yesterday. An analysis of the local situation would show many contributing causes to the sudden downfall of professional baseball in London this season. Higher admission and business depression were two very closely related and obvious factors which contributed, but there were many others, none of which seemed very damaging by themselves, but which had their heavy cumulative effect.

London fans did not apparently want professional baseball this season The cash register bears testimony to that fact, but for all that neither does London as a city want to lose the game.

It is extremely doubtful if the few shareholders of the club will care o take another chance of the hazardous game of amusing the public, but it is believed that some plan will be forthcoming whereby the responsibility of keeping professional baseball in London will be spread over a greater

That was one of the weaknesses in the organization of the London Tecumseh Club. The club took on too much of the atmosphere of a private corporation, and thereby laid ftself open to the fans responding in kind and taking a businesslike attitude toward baseball. The atmosphere effect was not sought, but nevertheless was given. President Heard and his associates, particularly Norman Keene, who have stuck with the ship this year, deserve credit for trying all season to find an answer to the baseball situation. Whether they are businessmen, as some of the fans may think, or sportsmen, as a good many more know they are, they've taken quite a large-deficit this year without any loud wail and rather sportingly.

Hamilton Spectator:

"Grand Rapids is not alone in its desire to have Hamilton and London dropped from the M.-O. League. A writer in the Muskegon Chronicle says that the two Canadian cities have proved a great disappointment and that every tour the Michigan clubs have made to Ontario has been a losing one, financially. What he says may be true; but if Muskegon had been in the league last season, when attendance records were being made, the fans in that city would think different of both Hamilton and London. There is no better city than Hamilton, but poor business management early in the year made the season a deplorable one. Hamilton fans would be just as well pleased if this city was represented in an all-Canadian league, with Montreal and Ottawa represented, but President Halligan well knows that the Hamilton and London territory is too valuable to be dropped on account of

Dempsey Displays Dazzling Speed Against Little Men

Has Improved Fitz Shift and Doubled Its Speed-Champ in High Good Humor, Pulls New Stuff and Comedy On Referee.

Dempsey had an exciting day. Early in, the morning, returning from his road work, he found a huge packing case ten feet long on his front porch. Getting a hammer, the champ, attacked the case vigorously, and in a moment nails and splinters were flying. When a few boards had been knocked to pieces or pried off Dempsey uncovered a oig brass and steel piece of machinery with shafts, electric motor and revolving drum, that looked like a gigantic trout reel.

dragged the machine out and laid it on the porch For half an hour Jack puzzled over it, for no scrap of writing or printed matter accompanied the case, to show what the machine was supposed to do and nohody present could figure it out.

Mike Trant thought it was a huge fishing reel, designed to be put on the porch facing the lake, so that Jack could wind a couple of miles of line on the big reel, throw his hook in the lake and when there was a bite, could throw the switch of the electric motor and reel his fish in without further exertion.

Washing Machine? Washing Machine?

Bill Young said it must be a clothes-washing machine to keep the champ's sweaters clean. Jack's brother, Ber-nard, just arrived, guessed that it was an electric fan to blow fresh air into

In the missing boxers with a neat punching style and turn of speed.

In the first round, Dempsey let Trambitas whale away at him almost without a return, ducking and dodging, slapping blows aside, staying close and avoiding everything, with swift movements that made even the fast little fellow seem slow. At the same time, he kept danching lightly around and around the ring. It was a beautiful exhibition of skilled boxing and perfect judgment of timing and distance. Dempsey never showed to better advantage, even when slugging with the giants of his staff. The way he could shift at close quarters with the swift little fellow, threaten with the right as his feet were moving, and snap in a short, little straight left to the chin was an education in technique.

The third opponent was Ray Newman, a heavyweight, thick-necked, wide-shouldered and rather thick around the waist. Here Dempsey began to punch, although he never pressed Newman hard or tried to drop him to the floor. He encouraged Newman to let his right go with everything behind it, and as the flying fist came over the champion bobbed neatly under it or stood still for a second and brushed it aside with a sweep of the forearm that turned Newman around, where Dempsey caught him with a swift hook on the neck or ear before he could duck. Here Jack showed more new stuff. sweaters clean. Jack's brother, Bernard, just arrived, guessed that it was an electric fan to blow fresh air into a coal mine. Jack said that he'd erect the machine and turn on the juice and when it was running some one might find out what it was for, but it developed that the cottage had only acetylene gas, and the nearest power and light wires were at Saratoga, ten the mystery of the machine, hunted up the shipping tag, and sent the sender a wire. saying: "Have the contraption, it was the shipping tag, and sent the sender a wire. saying: "Have the contraption, it was the shipping tag, and sent the sender a wire. saying: "Have the contraption, it was the shipping tag, and sent the sender a wire. Will His Dream Come True

Title fight, he says, like waking —By LUIS ANGEL FIRPO

Special to The Advertiser.

Atlantic City, N.J., Sept. 7.—"On total day, I began the last and most earnest part of my training for my fight for the championship of the world. After a day of rest, I went at the boxing once more in earnest. Today I worked harder than at any time yet, and I shall work a little harder each day until the time where I stop to rest for the day of the fight,

"I had today a splendid two-round workout with the colored fighter, John Lester Johnson. It was his first day with me here. Johnson fought Dempsey, and at one time he took a decision from the man, who is now the champion of the world. Johnson is a great help to me, and I am glad to have him with me on this, the last week of my training for the great strugge.

"Today also, I had with me Bob Fitzsimmons, son of the once great fighter. With him I boxed two rounds, and both Johnson and Fitzsimmons will remain with me until I go to New York for the fight. I am glad to have Fitzsimmons with me, because he is of great assistance as a sparring partner, and too, because he is my good friend. When I first came to this country we trained together. Then it was much for me to hope that some day I would do as well as a fighter as young Fitzsimmons, and now I am to fight for the championship of the world, and we are training together once more. It is now less than two years since I came to this country from the Argentine for the first time, It is only a few short months ago, when I trained with Fitzsimmons.

"In those days I would read in this paper, that this fighter or that fighter so thousands of dollars for a fight rest. tittle harder each day until the time wherf I stop to rest for the day of the sight.
