

THE ARK.

We are informed that lately an eminent ship-builder of one of the outports, upon reading the dimensions recorded as those of the Ark, was so struck with the just proportion that pervaded the whole plan of construction, and the similitude that it bore to that in use at the present day, that he applied himself to the formation of a model which would explain at sight the character and capacity of the huge vessel so well known in religious history; and, to exhibit how little our largest ships vary from her admeasurement, a model of the British Queen has also been constructed on the same scale. In both these works of art the proportions are observed to the greatest nicety. It is understood that the models will be presented for exhibition by the ingenious projector to some public institution in the metropolis.—Shipping Gazette.

SOCIAL AND DOMESTIC AFFECTIONS.—Man would be a miserable being, were it not for the indulgence of the social and domestic affections—and nothing desolates the human heart like the loss of near connexions and friends. Death is trebly armed with terrors to those who enjoy unalloyed happiness in their domestic relations—while on the other hand, the loss of those whom a man holds most dear, seems to sever the ties which bound him to life. May he survive his relations and friends? was the imprecation of a Roman on the person who destroyed the monument of his ancestors. A more dreadful curse could scarcely be pronounced.
