

The first of these is the fact that the United States is a young nation, and that its history is a history of growth and expansion. It is a history of a people who have been able to overcome the difficulties of a new and untried experiment in self-government. It is a history of a people who have been able to maintain their principles in the face of the most powerful and hostile nations of the world. It is a history of a people who have been able to create a new and better world for themselves and for the world at large. It is a history of a people who have been able to do all this in the face of the most formidable obstacles that have ever been placed in the way of a young nation. It is a history of a people who have been able to do all this in the face of the most formidable obstacles that have ever been placed in the way of a young nation.
