

The Appendices also list the numerous Canadian and American sources which have provided the basis of the report's content. In all, some sixty American publications, fifty American interviewees, fifteen Canadian interviewees, and twenty Canadian publications were consulted in preparing the report. While most sources were quite cooperative, two U.S. sources were particularly helpful. The U.S. government, mainly the Department of Commerce, and the Associated General Contractors were both very generous with their time and information, in the name of increased competition.