unanimous Choice has so often made you, and for the worthy Discharge of which Office you are so universally admired. And, though you only seem insensible of the rare Talents so conspicuous in all your Actions, and your known Modesty chains every Pen from an Attempt to record them, yet the Regard paid them now will convey their Remembrance to Futurity, and their Possessor be esteemed and revered equally by the present and succeeding Ages. But I ought to consider that the Moments of the Great are precious ; and therefore, not to incur your Displeasure, whilst I am soliciting your Favour, permit me only to gratify my Ambition, in continuing to subscribe myself, what your Goodness has made me,
