Hon. Arthur Meighen stated in reply to W. E. Knowles of Moose Jaw, it had not been contemplated that the military voters' act would apply to by-elections, although legally it would.

Mr. Knowles pointed out that almost invariably there were by-elections after a general election. New ministers would have to go back to their constituencies for re-election.

Mr. Meighen said it was hoped to avert the tremendous task of holding by-elections in war time. "The best way would be not to have any ministers defeated," he said humorously.

"Better put that in the act," suggested Hon. Charles Murphy.

Shutting Out Worthy Ones.
Dr. Neely of Humboldt asked that the Government enlarge the scope of the franchise further. Naturalization difficulties, he said, should not stand in the way of a more complete franchise to women. By this legislation many women who were British-born and engaged in war work would be shut out. Hon. Mr. Meighen said that the difficulties was appointed to draft a resolution of sympathy with Rev. Dr. Pugsley thought that the latter was the real reason. Therefore, women who give valuable service at home should be enfranchised. The premier, he said, had declared that the provisions said, had declared that the provisions of the naturalization law were an obstacle to doing this. But surely this difficulty could be overcome. Dr. Pugsley went on to say that the premier had placed himself on record as being in favor of granting the suffrage to all women, and had even moved an amendment that this matter be considered by Parliament before adjournered by Parliament before adjoument. Dr. Neely of Humboldt said that the Government was adopting a policy of discrimination. voters. He therefore suggested that in the provinces where women were permitted to vote in the provincial elections they should be allowed to vote in this election. He would move, he said, an amendment to this effect. There was an insinuation, he said, in the attitude of the secretary of state (Meighen) that the women who had used their influence in support of the soldiers were those who had relations at the front. This, he thought, was an unworthy insinuation. Friday, but they had been stalled along on. Hon, Arthur Meighen disclaimed any the road. They did not contain all the OTTAWA, Sept. 11.—Steps are being feeling of mistrust for the women of Canada who had not relatives at the information the foreign minister defront. It was not a question of trusting the women, he said. The Government merely thought that the sentiment of the soldier overseas would be Meighen promised consideration.

After recess Mr. McCraney asked that the list made by the enumerators be posted as soon as possible, and suggested that they should be up before nomination day, and Mr. Meighen, while objecting to going that far, said that the ten days allowed by the bill might be extended to twelve. Writs would be issued five or six weeks before election day.

An amendment by Dr. Neely proposed thad got as far as Halifax had made as far as Halifax had made as a sacrifice as the man twirling a cause. Tanlac is a powerful recomment to give the federal vote to all women in those provinces where the legislature has granted women's suffrage. It was defeated on division. The Government took the view that to give the vote to all women would nullify the compensation given under the bill to relatives of soldiers.
