"EAST LYNNE"—GREAT PHOTO-PLAY. An unusual offering for the week at the Grand is P. P. Craft's wonderful English revival of the celebrated old play, "East Lynne," in photo-play form. This film is notable for many reasons. Primarily it perpetuates the acting of a most distinguished company of London players, headed by

been devoted to spectacular subjects depending upon multiplicity and rapidity of incidents for effectiveness. "East Lynne" is not spectacular; it is simply sweet, beautiful and pathetic—the greatest love-drama ever written. Hence it is easy to understand its popularity, for next to the Bible, Mrs.

Wood's great work has been translated into more languages than any book ever written. In making the film the text of the novel, rather than the familiar dramatic versions has been followed with the result that many striking and beautiful features never acted on any stage are presented in previous stage productions the limitations of the oral drama have relegated these features to "off-stage business"—that is the players have been content to describe them rather in dialog than in the presence of the audience. Such incidents are the shooting of Halli-

John, the old game-keeper, the clandestine meeting of Richard and Barbara Hare and Archibald Carlyle in the forest, Levison's pursuit of Lady Isabel on the sands of Boulogne, their flight from "East Lynne" in the family chaise, the arrest and conviction of Levison for murder, and innumerable other incidents.
