TONIGHT AND TUESDAY AT IMPERIAL STARTLING TRUTH

Hamlin Garland, whose writings are so familiar to readers of smart current literature, such as is contained in the Ladies' Home Journal, and other leading magazines, has imbued Vitagraph's film story, "Money Magic," with his delight ful style and bright fresh out-of-door atmosphere. It is a story of excellent literary merit to begin with and is redol-ent of the balmy air and picturesque scenery of real California, where it was photographed.

Crocket upon a little lad named Ronald Cunningham. The boy, only eight years of age, had been suffering for nearly two months, the result of the presence of a pin in his bronchial tubes. How the lad happened to get the pin into his throat is not known, but the parents believe that while playing he must have swallowed the object, which finally lodged in his throat and gave much trouble.

The operation was performed by Dor. M. Case. The afflicted region of the boy's bronchial tubes was X-rayed on Saturday and the location of the pin discovered. It was in a difficult position to reach and a comparatively new process was introduced by the attending physicians to dislodge it. By means of tubes the pin was extracted by the same route by which it entered the bronchial tubes. Under the system it was unnecessary to make any level plays and the pin was finally the process of the process and give all information.
