does not acknowledge mere pollesmen as his masters, for last night he strongly protested that he was 'the son of God." Like a good many other human beings he has a wife, but "ahe does not matter." The police enquired as to her whereabouts, but he answered that it made ne difference about her as he was living in his own way and could not be troubled with a wife. Lewis is a well dressed negre, and his inseparable companions are a hymnbook and a bible with a piece of yellow sibbon around it. He was perfectly at ease this morning, answering all questions put to him in a calm, deliberate manner. He has just come from Fredericton, where he preached for seventy-two days and the people are still allve. The following highly editying conversation took place between Lewis and the magistrate:

"What do you say to causing a disturbance?"

"Well, H I am causing a disturbance."

urbance?"
"Well, if I am causing a disturbance am ordered to do so by Him who will orgive me for shouting. Shouting! Excuse me, sir, but what is shouting?"
"Where do you belong?"
"I belong to Ged."
"Yes, but what country?"
"England."

ing."
"I mean have you a church?"
"A temple made with hands? No sir, I have only the gospel of my God."
"Where is your wifs?"
"I don't know. I can't keep her and she is looking out for herself. I don't bother about her worldly ways."
"Were you ever here before."
"Oh yes, years ago. I disremember what for. Look up your books and you will find out."
Officer Killen gave evidence as to the disturbance created and Austin, after politely requesting permission to put a question to the officer, remarked: "I am the helper of God.

am the helper of God.

George Tower and Clarence Tower were charged with having injured some ornamental trees in front of the house of Henry Hilyard on Douglas Avenue. George, with much weeping, declared that he knew nothing about it, but Clarence manifully owned up that he was the one who did the mischief. He had picked some flowers off the trees, not thinking that it was any harm. George was riding a bicycle at the time and Clarence came over and asked him to hold the flowers while he had a ride on the wheel. George did so, and while standing on the street with the flowers a man came over and hit him with something, and took the hit him with something, and took the flowers.

The magistrate explained to the boys how guilty they had been and pointed out that destroying trees in this city where it is hard to cultivate them was a serious offence.

Mr. Hilyard said that on account of youngsters acting as these have done, all the ornamental trees in front of his place have been destroyed. He complained of the disgraceful condition of affairs on Douglas avenue. The police never go out that way and on Saturday night, especially when crowds from Milford and Fairville come over, it is a perfect hell, and on Sunday mornings the condition of the road is a disgrace. Residents along the avenue are now taking up their ornamental trees as it is useless for them to attempt to do anything with their grounds when there is absolutely no protection from the police.
