It would be too much of a proposition to attempt to reply to him in correspondence, but there are so many points that the writer did not seem to understand, or have the facts concerning them, he would be glad to have him call at any time.

McLellan Meeting In Opera House

Large Audience Gave Splendid Hearing to Candidate for Mayor and Engineer Philips.

The last gun in the civic contest was fired on Saturday evening by Messrs. Philips and McLellan at a largely attended meeting at the Opera House. The audience gave the speaker a splendid hearing. Nothing new was presented to them for their consideration, the old general statements that cheap power was available if the city undertook to distribute the Musquash Power itself instead of making a bargain with the Power Company for the two year term proposed by Mayor Schofield, were repeated, but no evidence was adduced to support this claim. The best that Mr. Philips could do with the figures of cost given by Mayor Schofield was to say the Mayor was taking it for granted they would not be able to sell the current, but he did not question their correctness. Roy Willett acted as chairman and in introducing the speakers said the opposition had waged a war of misinformation and he quoted from experience a number of Ontario towns arguing that the same results would follow here. Mr. Philips, who was the first speaker, repeated his former statements that no increase of taxation would result from the city building a new distribution system as the users of the current would pay all the bills. In concluding his remarks he told the audience they had absolutely nothing to give them, but were only pointing out what they could get for themselves if they would only go after it. Mr. McLellan was given a good reception by the audience. He said it was not his intention to make any remarks of a personal kind. The campaign he had arrived at the 10th of the month, but since that time the action of the Germans had nothing on the tactics of the opposition. He contended the present City Council was on the side of the Power Company, and while he did not attribute improper motives to any one, this was the conclusion he had arrived at from their proceedings to date. He warned the people that the fight would not be ended on Monday, even if the candidates for municipal distribution were elected, for they would have all financial forces of Canada, and perhaps of the United States, here fighting to save the Power Company from going under.

In closing, he urged every man and woman to get out and work to roll up a big majority so that there could be no question as to the minds of the citizens on this matter.
