INTRODUCTION XXIII

The editorial devices used in this volume remain those described in the Introduction to Volume 9 (p. xix). A dagger (+) indicates a Canadian document that has not been printed. Editorial excisions are shown by an ellipse (...). The phrase "group corrupt" indicates decryption problems in the transmission of the original telegram. Words and passages that were struck out by the author, marginal notes and distribution lists are reproduced as footnotes only when important. Unless otherwise indicated, it is assumed that documents have been read by the addressee. Proper and place names are standardized. The editor has silently corrected spelling, punctuation and capitalization, as well as transcription errors whose meaning is clear from their context. All other editorial additions to the documents are indicated by the use of square brackets. Documents are reprinted in either English or French, depending on their language of origin.

The preparation of this volume was a collective effort. The Historical Section continues to depend on the expertise of the National Archives of Canada for help in locating relevant records. Paulette Dozois, David Smith and Robert McIntosh of the Government Archives Division responded quickly and cheerfully to requests for help. Maureen Hoogenraad of the Manuscript Division was equally helpful. Ciuineas Boyle, Access to Information Co-ordinator at the Privy Council Office, and her colleague, Herb Barrett, facilitated access to Cabinet records for the period. Corrinne Miller, archivist at the Bank of Canada, was indispensable in dealing with that collection.

Michael Rasminsky and Andrew Coyne kindly granted permission to reprint material from their fathers' collections. My overseas colleagues, Heather Yasamee and Keith Hamilton of the Records and Historical Services, Foreign and Commonwealth Office, helped arrange for the declassification of several important British documents. William Burr of the National Security Archive, Washington, D.C., was also helpful in this regard. Mark Hayes of the Naval Historical Center in Washington, Marijke van Faassen of the Institute of Netherlands History, David S. Patterson of the Office of the Historian, United States Department of State, and Kunihiro Haraguchi of the Diplomatic Record Office, Ministry of Foreign Affairs of Japan, identified some of the individuals in the List of Persons.

Ted Kelly helped research parts of this volume and guided it through production with diligence. Christopher Cook, whose knowledge of the archival collections reflected in this volume is unrivalled, remained my main research assistant. He was ably assisted at times by Joseph McHattie, Nelson Joannette, and Tina McLauchlan. Michael Stevenson also contributed research for several sections in this volume and compiled the index. As always, it was a pleasure to work with this team of fine historians.

Don Barry, Hector Mackenzie and Norman Hillmer, former editors of this series, offered advice and encouragement. My colleague, Mary Halloran, provided good-humoured support. The general editor of this series, John Hilliker, carefully reviewed the whole manuscript, and played a major role in helping to define the scope of this volume as well as its predecessor. The series would not be possible without the support of the director of the Outreach Programs and e-Communications Division, Roger Bélanger, and his predecessor, Gaston Barban. I remain solely responsible for the final selection of documents in this volume
