Questions and Answers.

Miscellaneous.

Unpaid Legacies.

In the case of a farmer becoming insolvent, and never having paid legacies mentioned in will to his sisters, and in the absence of a written agreement, can interest be collected as a first charge on the estate, on legacies which remain unpaid after the time specified in the will?

Ontario. SUBSCRIBER.

Ans.—Interest is payable in respect of the legacies. But whether interest or principal of such legacies is a charge on the farm or other property included in the estate, depends upon the terms of the will. We would require to be informed of the exact wording of same in order to give an opinion on the point.

Lump Jaw.

If there is a cure for a new-formed lock jaw on a cow, kindly name the remedy?

FARMER.

Ans.—We read this question as lock jaw, but we cannot understand what a new-formed lock jaw would be like. The nature of the disease called "lock jaw" makes such an enquiry very improbable, so we concluded that it is a lump jaw that is newly formed. The remedy for lump jaw is the iodide-of-potassium treatment, which consists of giving the drug three times daily dissolved in water and sprinkled on the food. Start with dram doses, and increase by one-half a dram daily until the patient shows a loss of appetite and thirst. A discharge from the mouth and eyes, as well as a scruffy skin, are also indications to cease. If necessary, repeat the treatment in six or eight weeks.

Silos -- Sweet Clover.

1. I have become interested in silos, and would like a suggestion as to what material is the best to build these of at present. Cement is the most popular, and such material has proved a success lately. I have heard of what they call the — silo, which, I am told, is spruce plank, with some preparation put in to make the plank durable. No doubt you have heard of them, and perhaps have had some experience as well. Please tell me what you know about them. Are they a success? They are offered to hand for $180, which is some cheaper than the cement silo, if they will stand up and are durable. Please tell me the approximate cost of a cement silo 12x30 feet, aside from the drawing of the gravel and sand. One complaint is made of cement silos that they hold dampness and freeze considerably. Would a mixture of hydrated lime prevent the dampness going through?

2. About sweet clover. If what your correspondent in the last "Advocate" says about it is true, those who know it as a bad weed must be wrong. If it is as good as he says, why do not the agricultural papers give it credit for all it is worth. I am interested in it on account of its value as bee pasturage.

A. C. T.

Ans.—1. We have seen these silos of which you speak, and the silage was in first-class condition. We have never heard of any blowing down, and as none of these silos have been in existence for many years, we can't tell you how long they will stand. A concrete silo would probably cost you in the vicinity of $200, counting cost of material and labor. We have had in "The Farmer's Advocate," from time to time, articles dealing with the construction of silos, and in some instances they run lower than $200. You probably have a contractor in your community who would be glad to quote you a price. People who have properly constructed cement silos, very seldom complain of the quality of the silage if the corn was right when it was filled. The frozen silage will thaw and fall off just about as fast as the cattle will consume it, so there is seldom any waste.

2. There must be some experimental work done with sweet clover before agricultural papers will comment it. There is a strong prejudice throughout the country that it must live down, but by a year from now "The Farmer's Advocate" hopes to have the result of some experiments at Weldwood to give its readers.

Roofing That Lasts
