If Thomas Garland is Enjoying Late Lamented Pirate's Ill-Got-ten Gains Halifax Hasn't Heard of It—Not a Piece of Eight Ever Dug up in Blue Nose Land.

HALIFAX, N. S., Jan. 13-If Thomas Garland, deep-sea sailor, of Sydney, found Captain Kidd's cache of treasure when he came to Halifax looking for it last July and is now enjoying the III-gotten gains of the famous pirate, it has not come to the ears of Nova Scotians. Garland has disappeared as completely as if he had never existed, and the legend of Spanish gold, buried below a murdered man, somewhere in the Province between Yarmouth and Glace Bay, is as much a legend as it ever was.

AN INFALLIBLE CHART

Garland was reported to have had a chart which he obtained in Zaira, Spain, from a lineal descendant of a member of Captain Kidd's crew, who remained unhanged. The chart located a treasure of golden church vessels and plate together with thirty-six small kegs full of the regulation "doubloons" and silver dollars, somewhere in the vicinity of Halifax.

GROANS OF SOULS IN PAIN

There have been other charts, and when the Garland story appeared in a local paper a citizen of Halifax gave out the information that there was a spot, not far from a gloomy swamp, and within easy distance of the "main," that smelled strongly of hidden gold. A man built a house there some years ago but had to remove it again because in the dark of the moon there mingled with the melancholy hoot of the owl and the whine of the wind in the rigging, the rattle of chains and the groans of souls in pain. At any rate Kidd's treasure has been the subject of much search and intense excitement at one time or another in almost every part of the Province, although not a solitary plece of eight was ever found in Nova Scotians from the land to th
