

ve Cure for s and Colds

Syrup of Linseed and Turmeric is a cure for colds, coughs and croup. It is the best remedy for these affections when there is pain in the chest. It would not be surprising if Dr. Chase's Syrup of Linseed and Turmeric had saved thousands of lives from pneumonia and consumption. There is no doubt that this famous remedy is not recognized as a valuable cure for croup, coughs, colds and croup.

It is quite true FERROL is an emulsion of Cod Liver Oil and is particularly good one at that. But it combines iron and phosphorus with the oil, and these are just what are needed to make the emulsion perfect and they are just what all other emulsions lack.

FERROL is unique because it combines iron and phosphorus with Cod Liver Oil.
It is pleasant to take and easy to digest.
It holds the record for increasing the weight (95 lbs from the use of 25 bottles).

The formula is freely exposed and its bona-fides are vouched for by emulsion analysts in Canada, the United States and Great Britain.
It is endorsed by prominent physicians of all schools.
It is used in all the leading Hospitals, Sanitariums and other Public Institutions.
The London (Eng.) Lancet, after careful analysis in its own laboratory, fully endorses it.
We are prepared to substantiate all the above statements.
FERROL is the embodiment of health, strength and vitality, and

The Joys of Cuddletime.

As the evening shadows gather, Then 'tis cuddletime, I know, When my baby, dressed for dreamland, Comes a-sleeping to me so.
Cuddles and hugs of me to hold him On my knees and "rock-a-bye."
As the purpling sun sinks lower
To the glowing western sky,
And he cuddles to me nearer,
As the firelight softly glows,
And across the dusky portals Glimmering shadows throw:
And two dimpled arms about me Are clasped tighter for a kiss—
And, was ever richer necklace Placed about one's neck than this!

Soon the drooping, drooping lashes Cover up two eyes of brown, And the tumbled head so golden On my breast sinks lower down.
Ah, the sweetness of the pleasure, Making life one golden dream,
With a dimpled face to cuddle When it comes to cuddletime.

SHOULDER TO SHOULDER

The young pastor stood by the gate and shaded his eyes as he looked down the road. As the approaching figure came a little nearer, he understood the oddity of its appearance.
There were two men, and one of them was carrying the other on his back.
When they reached the pastor the burden bearer paused. He was a stout fellow of more than medium height.
'Howdy, sir,' he said in a deep voice, 'I trust you are quite well?'

'Quite well, thank you,' the young pastor replied.

The burden on the stout man's back squeezed uneasily. 'Lemme down, Tom,' it said.

The stout man's voice suddenly softened. 'You ain't a bit heavy, Phil. Don't you get down unless you're tired or riding.'

'I am tired, said the burden.
'Friend of mine who's a little bit under the weather,' the stout man explained. 'Got a bit tired coming up that long hill, and that's how I happened to be toting him.'

The pastor looked at the stout man's friend. He was only a boy of eighteen, perhaps, whose appearance showed the ravages of a wasting disease.

'Phil ain't what you'd call pretty robust,' the stout man somewhat happyly explained. 'He's a little shabby about the legs and wants fleshing up a bit. All he needs is a breath or two of this mountain air, and a plateful of good country feed.'

The boy shook his head.
'Tom knows better,' he said in his hoarse tones. 'I ain't a-going to get well, an' he knows it. It's my lungs.'

The stout man gave the boy the passage.

'We want to find a boarding place, Phil and I. Just a quiet house where the air is good and the feed is good, and where we can see the sun rise and set. And we'll pay well for it.'

The pastor reflected for a moment.
'I think the place for you is the Widow Langley's,' he answered. 'She has plenty of room and I have no doubt will be glad to receive you. She lives just beyond the turn in the road. You can see her chimney through the trees there.'

'Thank you,' said the stout man.
'Come Phil.'

The pastor stood in the roadway watching the two strangers until they passed around the curve. The stout man was merrily whistling and keeping step to the music. The sick boy's head drooped upon his bearer's shoulder.

That evening the pastor had a caller. It was the stout man. He came up the walk a little diffidently. The pastor was on the broad porch. 'Come up,' he said cordially. 'I am glad to see you again. Take this easy chair.'

The stranger hesitatingly accepted.
'Thanky,' he said. 'You are very good. You see, he hesitated again, 'you see I thought it would be well to know somebody in the neighborhood—and it struck me the parson was the very one I ought to know.'

'The boy is in a critical state,' said the parson.

'Yes, he is.'

'There was a little silence.
'Do you wish me to recommend a doctor?'

The stout man shook his head.
'No. The boy's had all the doctoring he can stand. He's going to take his tonic out of the mountain air.'

'Have you come far?' the pastor asked.

'From Amityville. My partner's there at the hot springs trying to boil out his rheumatism. We're all show people, you see, he presently added.
'And is the boy in the show business, too?' the latter asked.

'Yes, he was born into it. His father was a trapeze performer and his mother a bicycle rider. The lad is a leaper and tumbler. Father and mother are both dead and since the boy got so sick he couldn't work, my partner and I have been looking after him.'

The sight of the boy at 17th, the neck of the stout doctor before the pastor, Phil, aged 'You are a fine lad.'

am glad to know you.'

The stout man flushed.
'None o' that,' he abruptly said.
'We knew his father and mother.
They were worthy people, and the boy is a good boy. Neither my partner nor I have been married, and the youngster sort o' seems like a son to us. There's no question about money—we have all that's needed.'

There was a brief silence.
'Don't think that I ever met a circus performer before,' said the young pastor.

'That's at man laughed.
'Gress we're all human,' he said.
'We have all joys and sorrows, our joys and our pains, very much the same as other folk. He don't you're sort o' prejudiced against us?'
