LETTERS TO THE EDITOR.

O. A. C. Examinations.

MR. EDITOR,—There appeared a letter from an O. A. C. student in your paper last week, which is very humiliating to not only the students of the second year but of the whole College, if the statements in the said letter were conveying to the public the sentiments of the second year students. That the letter is the product of a small mind, the expression of selfishness and conceit from a fellow who, because he did not know enough or want to know enough about his who, because he did not know enough or want to know enough about his work to write a short essay on the subject which our esteemed professor saw fit to assign him, most people will surmise. But in case some of your readers conclude that the students generally of the Ontario Agricultural College rebel and display ignorance in this way we beg to express our disgust at such a thing. The all-important pigmy who wrote this letter is not a farmer's son from Ontario or any where else, but is a fellow who knows practically nothing about farming and likely never will. It is to be regretted that such fellows find their way to our college. The truth is we have very few such specimens of late, but an account of past record the public mind is very ready to believe anything that indicates a lack of submission on the part of students to college officers. The majority of the students here at present are anxious to learn how to carry on agricultural pursuits success. present are anxious to learn how to carry on agricultural pursuits success-fully and are willing and pleased to be under Prof. Dean, who is an able and

This all important "Second Yea Student," however, would have Prof Dean and all the second year students bow to him. Not only that but the attention of the public had to be drawn attention of the public had to be drawn to his unjust treatment in order that they might make provision in the future for such specimens. It would not do to go to our president. No, our worthy president would not listen to such an unreasonable complaint, and our "Second Year Student" knew it from past experience.

Having given vent to some feelings of resentment, which surely were Having given vent to some feelings of resentment, which surely were justly called forth, we desire to convey to the public the correct feeling of the students to the officers in our college. We are satisfied with the discipline, the instruction and the rules for examination. Especially do we call attention to the excellent work done by Prof. Dean, who has lately been appointed dairy professor. He is a young Ontario farmer, who received his agricultural education in part at the O. A. C. Some of his ways are new, as would be expected. To explain about the essays: Prof. Dean asked the class to write short essays on the work gone over in dairying. He assigned to each student a different phase of the subject, so that when they were written we might meet as a class and have each essay read. Thus, the whole work would be reviewed in our hearing. The professor asked if we would prefer to choose our own subject, to which the majority replied no. But Mr. Newcomen maintained his right to have the subjects optional.

Prof. Dean did (on his own telling) assign one student a subject because,
as he said, he thought him "specially suited for it." Would that Prof.
Dean had thus considered the capabillities of each student and not of one only. I wish to emphasise the fact that the only fair way to conduct a written examination is for each student to have to write on the same questions. This is all that I ask and is not this what it should be.

I for one say he has done right to bring it before the public.

Again Sir, if the subject given the students to write an essay upon, is for the purpose of testing their knowledge and to count for, or, against them in their examination, I do not hesitate to assert that Prof. Dean does not understand his business, and that it is simply impossible for him or any other to tell what relation they bear to each other in order of merit unless all write on the same subject.

In conclusion, I must say that I fai to see anything in the letter of 2n year student to call forth the venon of McKenzie unless he, McK., think it will add a few marks to his essay.
