Duchess of Connaught. Demands Death Penalty A Sorrowful Bridal Party.

The Duchess of Connaught is a daughter of one of the men who called the German Empire into being. Frederick Charles of Prussia, known to history as the Red Prince, was the man who drove Bismarck into Metz in 1870 and prepared the way for the siege of Paris. The daughter of a great German soldier and the wife of a British Prince, the prayer for peace on her lips—and for a better understanding between Britain and Germany—must be a very real one.

St. Joseph's Mon. Dec. 2.—At a meeting of the Central Labor Council of St. Joseph's, representing nearly all the labor unions of the trade, resolutions were adopted unanimously demanding the death penalty for the McNamara. Indignation is at a high pitch among the union men on account of the affair.

Two Boston Women Killed When Speeding Auto Skidded and Overturned.

Boston, Nov. 30.—While chasing another automobile in which a newly married couple were endeavoring to escape the usual post-nuptial greetings, the pursuing automobile skidded at a sharp turn in the Roxbury district to-day, causing the death of two persons and cuts and bruises to two more.

The car was owned and driven by John J. Gormley, of Jamaica Plain, whose brother, James A., had just been married, and the couple had eluded their friendly pursuers momentarily following the wedding breakfast, and had started off in their automobiles before their absence was noticed. The chase was then taken up in another machine. The pursuing automobile was coming around the corner of Crawford Street and Walnut Avenue at a rapid rate when it skidded in the mud and was overturned. Gormley was thrown clear of the automobile and was unhurt.

Miss Galvin and Miss Gaffey were pinned beneath the car. The former was instantly killed, while Miss Gaffey died several hours later at the City Hospital, where she and her brother had been taken. Miss Milley was able to go to her home.

HAD HIS REVENGE.—An old resident of Hunt's Lane, Holytown, who was pelted with snow balls by some of the boys working at the Soap Factory yesterday, took revenge in a peculiar manner. He went into the factory and taking three boxes of soap, brought them outside, broke them open and scattered the soap around the street in front of the door.

Special Evening Telegram. LONDON, Dec. 8.

Lord Curzon, in the House of Lords, raised the Persian question, inquiring the Government's policy. He asked for the papers referring to Russia's first ultimatum, with regard to which Britain had advised Persia to comply. He thought that advice was unpalatable but wise. With regard to the second ultimatum, there was evidence that the American Treasurer-General, Mr. Shuster, had shown an unfortunate lack of acquaintance with diplomatic usage and language, but Lord Curzon wanted to know if Shuster's action was really an excuse for armed occupation on the part of Russia. The Government, he said, could not wash their hands of all responsibility for the second ultimatum. He forewarned that administrative partition would inevitably proceed to political partition, and therefore to a geographical one.

Lord Morley said that the troubles in Persia arose not out of any Anglo-Russian agreement, but from the very nature of the experiment which is being tried in Persia. With regard to Shuster, he agreed with Curzon, that the Treasurer-General had certainly shown want of tact. He had ignored the position, and the indisputable claims of Russia and Britain. Russia's object, he said, was the establishment of normal and stable relations with Persia, and the removal of all elements of discord. Russia intended to make further proposals to that end, though she did not aim at a violation of Persia's integrity or independence. Russia assured us categorically, said Morley, that such measures as had been taken were purely provisional. Regarding the indemnity, he hoped that Russia, after the crisis had passed, would find her way out of the difficulty. Britain, he said, had informed Russia that it would be impossible, under any circumstances, to recognize the deposed Shah. Concluding, Morley said, that there was good reason to hope that we should soon see a solution of the problem, which was now so full of difficulties, but was not altogether hopeless.

Lord Morley's statement in the House of Lords to-day, concerning Persian affairs, is regarded as easing the crisis in that country. It is assumed that Russia's further proposals, of the nature of which Morley gave no hint, would modify the last ultimatum. This ultimatum was described to-day by Lord Curzon as harsh, peremptory and precipitate. Sir Edward Grey will make a further statement with regard to Persian affairs, in the House of Commons next week.
