The Child-Dominated Home.

By RUTH CAMERON.

In whatever corner worn-out and antiquated aphorisms are being tucked away in this progressive age you will find that was once familiar to my ears. It is "Little children should be seen and not heard." It served on many an occasion to curb my enthusiasm or exuberance at a moment when these qualities threatened to project my personality too strongly. I can't say that the idea always appealed to me then as much as it does now, sometimes.

For the old attitude toward children in the home has been abandoned. Children are both seen and heard. They no longer form a pleasing background, they dominate the domestic canvas.

One of my reader friends gives a case in point—an extreme case, perhaps, but one which may recall experiences which other reader-friends have suffered, in a lesser degree.

The Conditions Are Ideal.
"I have just returned from a visit to a girl I used to know," she writes. "She has married 'very well' as the world phrases it, and with a devoted husband, four children and an ample income, one would think she ought to have an ideal home.

"Personally, I don't think she has. She prides herself upon the care she takes of her children and the time she devotes to them. The children are the centre of her existence and, of course, the centre of the home. They pervade its uttermost corner. Incidentally they are wholly undisciplined. The chief effort of my old friend is to keep them healthy, and in this she succeeds fairly well. Otherwise they run riot. They continually obtrude on conversation; at the table the conflict between their mother's desire to have them eat one thing and their own to eat something else dominates all else.

A Home Or A Kindergarten?
"Far from being seen and not heard they are both seen and heard from six in the morning until six at night, and their mother breathes a sigh of relief when they are 'finally out of the way' as she calls it. Her home isn't a home at all, it is an ill-ordered kindergarten."

As I said in the beginning, this is an aggravated case. But it is undeniable that children play a much more dominant part in the home than they did a generation or so ago. Personally I am fond of children. But I cannot say I like to see children permitted to dominate the home and home life, undisciplined and unrestrained, as many do.

The Cute Little Thing Drops Your Watch.

The cute little thing of three who confidently reaches for your watch, and having confiscated it, drops it on the floor, and the sweet little chap who trustfully lays dirty or buttery fingers on your best gown while you are calling at his home, may be joys to their mothers, but they are not to the casual guest.

One mother proudly told me recently that she considered her little son a human being with just as many rights as she herself has. She did not wish to "curb his individuality." A child unquestionably has rights. As unquestionably other people have also. A child has little idea of them. He must be disciplined in order to learn what his rights are, and in order that he may know when he exceeds them.

Prohibition Meeting.

The meeting held at the T. A. Armoury last night in the interests of Prohibition was largely attended. Mr. H. E. Cowan presided, and briefly explained the object of the gathering. It had been decided at a previous meeting to have a special committee take up the work of the campaign in the city. A Nominating Committee had been appointed to select officers, and Mr. George J. Coughlan acting for the Committee, had chosen the following:—

President—Dr. H. M. Mosdell.
Vice-Presidents—Messrs. C. R. Steer, Charles Myler and J. R. Johnstone.

Secretary—Mr. P. G. Butler.
The above nominations were then unanimously adopted by the meeting. Owing to the unavoidable absence of the President, Mr. Cowan was requested to remain in the chair and conduct the business of the meeting.

Mr. P. G. Butler thanked the Committee for nominating him as Secretary and pledged his support in the cause. He had only recently been converted to the Prohibition cause but had seen enough of the evil effects of liquor to throw himself fully into the campaign.

Mr. W. J. Ellis, President of the Total Abstinence Society was the next speaker. He had always been a total abstainer, and to be consistent he could not do otherwise than join forces with those who were trying to rid the country of the evil. His fight was not against the men who drink, nor against the men who sell liquor, as most of them are good fellows. Still he was thoroughly in earnest in his opposition to the traffic, but at the same time he believed that the campaign should be conducted inoffensively. Complete organization was necessary, and every agency should be utilized to secure the desired result. He knew that there was a strong sentiment in favour of Prohibition to-day, and felt quite certain that with a vigorous campaign more votes than necessary would be obtained.

Mr. J. M. Devine upon invitation, addressed the meeting and stated that he had given the matter of Prohibition much serious thought and careful study and had resolved to throw in his lot with those who favored the abolition of liquor. Many, said Mr. Devine, advocate moral suasion but to my mind this is of no use when a man's will power is gone, and the only effective way to settle the question is to abolish the traffic completely. He expressed the opinion that, in the coming election, a big majority would be rolled up for Prohibition.

Rev. J. S. Sutherland was the next speaker. He was pleased to hear the laymen speak because they were dealing with facts and not with theories. He had never done much temperance work himself but when the opportunity presented itself for him to vote for Prohibition in Canada he had done so and would gladly do so here in November. He was of the opinion that the people had the right to say whether Prohibition was good for the country or not, and in the coming campaign the welfare of the whole people should be considered rather than that of the individual.

Rev. Harry Royle wished to avail of the opportunity to repudiate certain stories that have been circulated since the question came up. He was a Temperance crank but at the same time would assist the campaign only in a gentlemanly manner. He spoke strongly against liquor being given to volunteers. He was a Britisher and wanted to see our volunteers most efficient, and thought that any business which makes them inefficient should be wiped out.

Mr. R. Callahan in a brief speech expressed his interest in the movement for Prohibition and hoped that the efforts of the Committee might be crowned with success.

The chairman then announced that a further meeting will be held in the same place to-morrow night. Before closing the meeting he outlined some of the work done in the various external districts of the Island, and the proceedings finished with the singing of the National Anthem.

S. MILLEY.Amusements.*"PEG WOFFINGTON."

The great two reel feature that the Crescent Pictures Palace is showing to-day received very favourable comment from the large audience who saw it yesterday and is pronounced one of the best pictures ever shown in the city. All the other pictures that go to make up to-day's programme are also of a high class. Mr. Dan Delmar who arrived by the Stephano sings: "The Violet, the Rose and You." Mr. Delmar possesses a powerful voice and sings his songs with expression and taste; there is no doubt but he will have a successful engagement at the Crescent as already he has made hosts of friends. On to-morrow "The Fatal Opal," a Kalem masterpiece in two acts.

"TREY O' HEARTS" DRAWS AT NICKEL.

The "Trey O' Hearts" was continued at the Nickel Theatre last evening and was witnessed by crowded houses. The weather was anything but pleasant but in spite of the rain Nickel-goers turned out in force to see this wonderful subject. The acting was very clever and all in attendance were delighted with it. This story is even more exciting than the "Million Dollar Mystery" and Nickel patrons are looking forward to it with pleasure. The other subjects last evening were fine, particularly the comedy entitled "Colored Villany" which kept the audience in roars of laughter. Messrs. Huskins and Cairns were in splendid form again and there singing was very favourably commented on. This evening the programme will be repeated and it is sure to draw crowded houses. To-morrow there will be a continuation of "The Million Dollar Mystery." This great story is now nearing the end. Don't miss to-day's episode.

AT ROSSLEYS.

Atlantis, Fisk and Jack opened their engagement at Rossleys last night and it is safe to say it is one of the most wonderful acts ever seen and such as has never been seen in the history of St. John's. Atlantis a handsome petite young lady of great charm and beauty on the huge ball has no equal. Her costumes are positively magnificent. Donald Fisk had the house in roars while taking off his numerous vests. They are certainly quick change artists and their daring feats on the huge rolling globe were past belief, especially the marvellous feat of Donald Fisk, standing on the monster rolling globe while descending a flight of stairs. The English Bull Dog in his bag punching act was also very fine. The wonderful finish of the act with Miss Atlantis in her wonderful dress of 200 yards of silk performing a serpentine dance on the rolling ball with her marvellous electrical and spectacular effects. The drop curtain of gold, one blaze of brilliancy held the house spell-bound. This act will be the talk of the town.
