RUTH CAMERON.

Something happened yesterday. It was an empty, queer-feeling day with an aching sense of something missing. Surely you can guess what happened. Something befell the train service, our bag of papers was thrown off at another station, and we didn't get our paper. To be sure, we called up a friend in another town and she read us the most important war news over the telephone so that we didn't have to undergo the supreme misfortune of being out of touch with the front. But those spoken words over the telephone weren't the same as having the paper crinkling in our hands and reading for ourselves the headlines and then the war column and then the report on the influenza situation and then looking at our favorite features. Hearing a paper read aloud, is never like reading it to oneself, anyway. I have heard of young married folks who had each been used to having a paper of their own and who almost came to disruption when the husband assumed the masculine right to read aloud bits over his coffee cup instead of giving his wife half the paper.

Woman's Right To Do Her Own Reading.

I fancy that is one of the feminine rights we are going to have the hardest time to establish—the right to read the paper to ourselves instead of having predigested bits fed out to us over the morning coffee or the evening pipe.

Really, though it did us good to miss that paper—the kind of good it always does one to miss anything one has been so accustomed to that one doesn't know how completely a part of the scheme of living it has become.

They mean More To Us Than We Have Any Idea.

Truly, these daily newspapers that come into our homes and put us in touch with the world from the North Pole to the South Pole, and from Chicago to Siberia and back the other way, are a more wonderful institution than we shall ever realize. I wrote once upon a time of the miracles of invention and organization which we take so much for granted that we entirely lose the sense of their miraculousness. I catalogued, among them, talking to a hole in the wall and having one's sister twelve miles away hear and answer; or sticking a bit of paper on the edge of a letter and having it carried safely over thousands of miles of land and sea, to one little town, into one little street and into the right mail box. How could I have failed to include among these miracles that of paying a cent or two cents and being told what the whole world is doing? I hope my newspaper comes tomorrow. I do not want another queer-feeling day. And yet I am not altogether sorry that it did not come today. One needs these jolts occasionally.

TREATMENT FOR SHOULDERS.

Pimply shoulders are indeed a blight to beauty. It is very probable that rich food and too little drinking water is the cause. Plenty of water, both internal and external, and an hour's exercise each day in the open air, will help you in this crusade for presentable shoulders.

An external treatment for shoulders, made unsightly by eruptions, consists in covering each pimple at night with some good camphor cream. As the cream will rub off during the night, unless covered with a cloth, it would be well for you to swathe your shoulders in thin cheese cloth. Neglect this last bit of advice and your labor in the cause of beauty will be wasted, and your bed linen much the worse for the experiment.

This simple treatment, if given every night for several weeks, will be the means of causing the obnoxious red spots to disappear.

AT THE PEACE TABLE.

Who shall sit at the table, then, when the terms of peace are made? The wisest men of the troubled lands in their silver and gold brocade? Yes, they shall gather in solemn state to speak for each living race. But who shall speak for the unseen dead that shall come to the council place?

Though you see them not and you hear them not, they shall sit at the table, too. They shall throng the room where the peace is made and know what it is to do.

The innocent dead from the sea shall rise to stand at the wise man's side. And over his shoulder a boy shall look—a boy that they crucified.

You may guard the doors of that council hall with barriers strong and stout. But the dead unbidden shall enter there, and never you'll shut them out. And the man that died in the open boat, and the babes that suffered worse. Shall sit at the table when peace is made by the side of a martyred nurse.

You may see them not, but they'll all be there; when they speak you may fail to hear.

You may think that you're making your peace alone, but their spirits will hover near. And when you make the terms of the peace you make with the tyrant whose hands are red.

You must please not only the living here, but must satisfy your dead.

Household Notes

Hens' nests should be kept as carefully clean as a canary bird's cage. Work in the garden is better for health and complexion than almost any medicine.

Osmeal macaroons with raisins and nuts in them are excellent for children's lunches.

An ink eraser will take the marks off pearl buttons when they come home from the laundry.

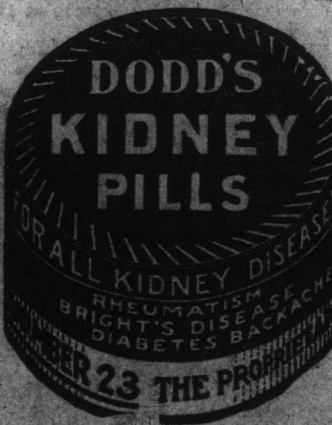

Barss--Janes.

An event of great interest to a large number of relatives and friends of both parties occurred on Tuesday afternoon, at five o'clock, at the residence of Dr. H. A. Payzant, Dartmouth, when Captain Godfrey A. Barss, R. A. M. C., was united in marriage to Miss Eda Clare Janes, daughter of J. W. Janes, of Hant's Harbor, Newfoundland. The ceremony was performed by Rev. Gordon P. Barss, of Tekkall, India, brother of the groom, who is home on furlough after seven years absence in India. The bride was given in marriage by Dr. Payzant. Only immediate relatives were present. The bride, dressed in a simple gown of white crepe de chene with veil and orange blossoms, and carrying a beautiful bridal bouquet of chrysanthemums and roses, and the groom in his uniform as Captain in the Guards Division presented a charming and inspiring picture to the friends gathered at this pretty home. A wedding supper followed the ceremony, after which the happy couple left by automobile on their honeymoon.

More than usual interest centres in this event. The groom, who a few days ago returned from the front on leave of absence, is a son of the late William T. Barss, of the law firm of King and Barss. He has given three years of service at the front in the great war, and the bride nearly two years. The groom was practicing medicine in Newfoundland, where he met his bride, when the war broke out. He offered his services to the Canadian government for medical work at the front; but owing to delay in receiving an appointment he crossed to England and was attached by the British authorities to the 19th Durham Light Infantry as Battalion Medical Officer.

This battalion experienced hard fighting and won distinction in the Somme battle. Subsequently Captain Barss was transferred to the Guards Division which also experienced much severe fighting. Here he served as Battalion Medical Officer and also in Field Ambulance work. He was through the Battle of the Somme, the Cambrai battle and his regiment helped to stop the German drive which began on March 21st of this year besides being in minor battles. Captain Barss was twice mentioned in dispatches for courageous service under fire during the Somme battle and the Cambrai battle. The bride who enlisted in 1916 as a V. A. D. nurse was also mentioned in dispatches by General Haig for heroic service during the bombing by the Germans of the emergency Field Hospital at St. Omer during the battle of Cambrai. When the Hospital was struck by bombs with resulting casualties in killed and wounded, Miss Janes with several other nurses remained at their posts, and she alone carried most of the wounded from her ward down two flights of stairs to the basement.

The happy couple having survived the dangers and hardships of war have now embarked upon the great voyage of matrimony and all unite in wishing them a long, happy and prosperous life. — Halifax Evening Mail, Oct. 23.

STORIED PLACES.

On Jordan's stormy banks I stand, and watch, with cheerful eye, the hurried Turks burn up the land, as they go whizzing by. Through storied scenes they wildly rush their coat tails flapping wide, they're scratching for the underbrush, where they may hope to hide. By cool Sileam's shady rill the Turk, in deep distress, is wondering how Kaiser Bill got him in such a mess. Could I but stand where Moses stood, and view the landscape o'er, I'd see the Turk famous for good from Jordan's sacred shore. The rose that blooms beneath the hill must shortly fade away, and so the Turk, with lust to kill must perish and decay. Too long, too long he's hung around, a bluish on this sphere; hark, from the tombs a doleful sound tells that his end is near. The Turk still trots on weary limbs, and leaves much dust behind; and, as we read, forgotten hymns, unbidden, come to mind. The hillsides and the towns and streams knew One, long long ago, who has inspired the hopes and dreams that all good Christians know. It is the soil of hallow'd works, and it is good to see such moral lepers as the Turks chased out of Galilee. Oh, may they be forever banned, forever and a day, from Canaan's fair and happy land, where their possessions lay.

The Eagle Met Him.

(From the Washington Correspondence of the Philadelphia Public Ledger.)
A remarkable incident happened in connection with Sir Eric Geddes' arrival at "an Atlantic port." When his ship was a day out, probably 500 miles from shore, a young American eagle flew on board. The bird was utterly exhausted and in a few more hours must have fallen into the sea.

"When some members of my staff first told me an American eagle had come aboard," said Sir Eric, "I thought they were pulling the First Lord's leg, which, of course, they couldn't do. I would not believe the yarn until they showed me. For want of a bird cage we had to put the eagle in the dog kennel to recuperate, and then we were to give him his liberty again."

"It might be said, then, that in this instance the British navy rescued the American eagle," someone suggested.

"It would be rather nicer, I think, to say the American eagle flew far to greet the British Navy," replied Sir Eric.
