

Danesbury House.

"How much longer am I to be nurse?" said Lord Temple, from the opposite end of the room.

Isabel laughed. "Why do you not bring him here, Reginald? You have kept him yourself."

"But the young Turk has got his eyes and hands on this shining curtain bracket. If I take him away, he may deafen Arthur's ears with screams; and they are not used to the music."

Isabel rose, and took the baby. But if he had lost the curtain ornament, he had found his mother and did not cry. She summoned the nurse, who carried away the child.

"I need not ask if you intend to make him a warder," said Arthur.

"No, that you need not," he heartily responded. "Neither do I intend to make any of his brothers an sisters who may come after him shall ever touch aught but water while I control them. I don't know what they may do afterwards."

"I'm up a child in the way he should go, and when he is old he will not depart from it." That was spoken by a wiser man than either you or I, Temple," said Arthur.

"Dinner, my lady," cried a servant, opening the door.

"We dine early on Sundays," remarked the viscount, as he followed his wife and Arthur to the dining-room. "Isabel has got me into the habit—and we find it to be a good one; more particularly as regards the convenience of the servants."

"Of course, if you are getting into good habits—do you know that St. George has become a water-drinker?"

"Has he?" St. George?

"He used to be a fortnight ago, and wine was placed on the table as usual when we have any one with us, for I don't force my temperate habits upon my guests," continued Lord Temple. "But St. George said I might order the wine off again; he had given up drinking it."

"Did he give his motive?"

"Simply that, feeling so much evil rising from indulgence in it, especially to young men, he had come to the determination to banish wine and beer from his own table before his children should grow up. Of course, that could only be done by abjuring them himself, and he has done it."

"And his wife also," added Isabel.

Arthur looked amused. "His wife! Charitable and to say that she loved her wine, and could not do without her porter. She was passionately offended with me once for telling her that it was the drinking porter made her fat."

"She did love her porter," resumed Isabel, "but she says she loves her children better and therefore makes her sacrifice; and a real sacrifice I can hardly imagine it to be to Charles."

"Ah, interposed Lord Temple, "if people were only brought up to drink water, as you say, it is a sacrifice the world knows little of."

CHAPTER XVII.

A NICE YOUNG MAN.

Arthur took leave of Lord and Lady Temple at the church door, as they were going in for evening service, and proceeded toward the Golden Eagle. The shops were closed, every shop was passed; but the gin-shops were open and lighted up, outside and in. Light this to be he said to himself; ought this marked distinction to be permitted? The shops closely shut, in accordance with our professed religion, and with God's commandment that the Sabbath shall not be profaned, while these flaunting liquor places, and their evil attractions, are staring boldly open! He recalled to mind what had been said by his brother-in-law that day of the legislature might do more to crush—Arthur would have said, not encourage—the vice, than they were doing.

As he reached the Golden Eagle. One of the first objects his eye encountered on entering was his brother Robert, in a state of semi-stupor. He had been sitting, with other of the Golden Eagle's public parlor, and was now reeling out of it into the bar, on his way to quit the house, having drunk away his money. Arthur went up to him and laid his hand upon his shoulder, and partially intoxicated as Robert was, he started at the sight, and covered visibly. He was dressed as Arthur had never yet seen him dressed, in a common gray suit of clothes; not at all like Sunday ones.

Arthur tucked his arm into his own, and led him out. The landlord followed; he had caught a word of the recognition.

"Oh, sir," he said to Arthur Danesbury, "is your brother?"

"Yes, sir," he said to Arthur Danesbury, "is your brother?"

"Yes, sir," he said to Arthur Danesbury, "is your brother?"

"Yes, sir," he said to Arthur Danesbury, "is your brother?"

always a supply of him, and not get paid. Candles he have had; and three leaves, and a quarter of butter he have had; and a go of brandy, as I sent for him, for he was a praying and crying for it as if he'd die; and two quarters and a half of gin; and a piece of soap; and a tumbler and plate he broke—he can't deny as he have had 'em, and owes me for 'em."

"How much is it in all?" inquired Arthur, putting his hand into his pocket.

"Well, sir, I know it's as much as four shillings, but I can't reckon it up in my head all in a moment. Oh, and there was the washing of his sheets I forgot that. And there's the rent besides."

"How much?"

"Two weeks, sir, come to-morrow, at four and sixpence, making nine shillings. And if I say five for what he owes me, instead of four, I shan't be a gainer. A precious trouble my husband have had of him in his drunken bouts! That'll be 14 shillings, sir, altogether."

Arthur placed a sovereign in her hand. "Is any notice requisite because he will quit your house to-night?"

"No, sir," answered the woman, who appeared to be a sufficiently honest one, whatever may have been her faults of manner. "He gave me notice a week ago, and though he was drunk then he said it, of course it was a notice. Six shillings I'm afraid as I've not got enough change, sir, but I can run to the nearest public and get it."

"No, do not run there. You may keep the 6 shillings in recompense for any trouble he may have been to you."

"Well, sir, there ain't many like you," exclaimed the grateful woman, after a pause of astonishment—"but you carries the gentleman in your face. Can I do anything else, sir? Shall I run up and light a bit of fire in his grate; his sheets cholly."

"Oh, no. I shall want a cab brought presently, if you have anyone to send."

Use the Best.

Is a good motto. It is particularly good when applied to anything which we use daily at our own meals. Bread may truly be called the staff of life and we cannot be too careful as to what we put into it. Good health is of too great importance to be trifled with, and biscuits or pastry made with the alum powders which are so commonly sold in this country, are very injurious to the system, leading to dyspepsia and numerous other troubles resulting therefrom. The pure cream of tartar and soda baking powders are healthful in every respect. In this class of powders the Pure Gold Brand has obtained the highest position and is always reliable.

The prettier a woman is the more she needs something else.

A man's wife should always be the same especially to her husband; but if she is weak and nervous, and uses Carter's Iron Pills, she cannot be, for they will make her "feel like a different person," at least so they say, and their husbands say so too.

Hope seems to sit down to rest sometimes.

A Man Made Happy.—GENTLEMEN,—For five years I have been a great sufferer with Dyspepsia; the pain in the pit of my stomach was almost unbearable and life only seemed a drag to me. When I would go to sleep I would have horrible dreams, and my life became very miserable, as there was no rest either day or night. But with the use of only two bottles of Northrop & Lyman's Vegetable Discovery this unhappy state has all been changed and I am a well man. I can assure you, my case was a bad one, and I send you this that it may be the means of convincing others of the wonderful curative qualities possessed by this medicine, that are specially adapted for the cure of Dyspepsia. A lady customer of mine had the Dyspepsia very bad, she could scarcely eat anything, and was troubled with pains similar to those I suffered with; and she cured herself with two bottles of Northrop & Lyman's Vegetable Discovery. I wish you success with your medicine, as I am fully convinced that it will do all you claim for it.

For Swelling and Felons.

Gentlemen—My little girl, aged 3, had a large swelling on her neck. I used Hayward's Yellow Oil on it and it disappeared in a short time. It also cured a felon I was troubled with.

Cannot Be Denied.

The curative influence of the pine in lung diseases is everywhere admitted, and when combined with other effective restorative remedies as in Dr. Woods' Norway Pine Syrup the effect is doubly beneficial. No case of cough, cold, asthma, bronchitis or lung disease can resist the healing powers of Dr. Woods' Norway Pine Syrup. 25 and 50 cents; at druggists.

THE KNIFE!

Fatal Affray at Bromhill, Man.—Two Brothers stabbed.

WINNIPEG, Dec. 13.—A fatal stabbing affray occurred at Bromhill, Man., on Sunday. Harry Vaughan crossed Geo. Randall's farm with a gun, following a jack-rabbit. Randall ordered him off, and the two had words. Vaughan threw his gun down on the snow and started to fight. Arthur Randall, a brother of George, ran up and joined in the fight, and broke the gun-stick over Vaughan, who drew a knife and stabbed both. George is dead, and Arthur is seriously wounded. Vaughan is highly respected. Randall was of a quarrelsome disposition.

"OUR CHURCH CHOIR."

A lady writing from a western Canadian city says: "Some half-dozen members of our church choir have used Harvard Brand's Syrup with wonderful results. I am never without it in my home or when I go abroad. I find that one small dose is quite sufficient to clear the voice and remove huskiness."

This lady voices the opinions of thousands of other singers in Canada. No other remedy is so popular with our amateur and professional vocalists. And use it because it is reliable, prompt, effective and pleasant to the taste. Every druggist in Canada sells the Harvard. Ask for the large 25-cent bottle.

ADVERTISEMENTS.

TO THE ELECTORS!

Shall All Saloons and Pans in London be Closed at Seven O'clock Every Night as at Present on Saturday Nights?

Twelve Good Reasons Why You Should Vote for Early Closing.

A Straightforward, Yet Moderate Proposal to Men and Women Who Possess the Responsibility of the Franchise.

We want an expression of your opinion by vote on the occasion of the coming municipal election, Monday, Jan. 2, 1893, whether it would not be better, in the interests of the community, as a suggestion to the license commissioners, to make the hour of closing the bars for the license year, beginning next May 7 o'clock p.m.

Our reasons for this movement are:

1. Because we believe Hon. W. E. Gladstone's statement—"Greater calamities are inflicted upon humanity by intemperance than the three historic scourges of war, pestilence and famine." The more bars and the longer hours the more drinking and consequently the more intemperance. The following London statistics indicate this:

Arrests for drunkenness, 1890..... 914
Arrests for drunkenness, 1891..... 602
Arrests for drunkenness up to the preceding week this year..... 482

2. Because these licensed houses are the base of our young men, who are attracted by the blandishments of friendship and the attraction of open bars. Therefore we appeal to the parents of London, whether abstainers or not, to vote with us, if not for their own sake for that of their neighbors' children.

3. Because the wages of the laborer and artisan, homeward bound, are often diverted into the barroom and the benevolent are burdened to help those whom drink has made poor. Ask the doctors, the King's Daughters and Sons, and the various benevolent workers if this is true. The liquor-sellers themselves admit they do the most of their business after 7 o'clock p.m.

4. Because if you are a friend of the early closing movement you ought to give the bartender a chance to close up early!

5. Because healthy men do not need liquor, and the sick man who prescribes it for himself has a fool for a patient. Indeed he ought to be prosecuted for practicing medicine without a diploma!

6. Because beer only makes the constant drinker appear well when his bones are like sticks in a bag of water. It's all "beer blast!"

7. Because a large proportion of the liquor sold under high sounding names, is fraudulent and absolutely poisonous. Hon. Geo. Gifford, American consul, La Rochelle, France, wrote in 1882: "All French brandy might properly, and perhaps ought to be, excluded from the United States on sanitary grounds," simply because such a thing as pure brandy is almost, if not entirely, unknown even in France, and what is true of brandy is true of so-called foreign wines.

8. Because, as Ruskin says, "The encouragement of drunkenness for the sake of the profit on the sale of drink is certainly one of the most criminal methods of assuaging the money hunger adopted by the bravos of any country." If it were only the drinker was killed it would not be so bad. You have but to look at the murder of Detective Phair to see what a few cents' worth of liquor can do! And the end is not yet. Every man hanged in London for crime was brought to the gallows through intemperance.

9. Because the public have to foot the bills! Who pay the jailers, turnkeys, the extra policemen, the witnesses and lawyers in criminal cases, three-fourths of which are caused by drink? And now, when we want to vote on a resolution introduced by an almost unanimous vote of the council, without any expense to the city, these license-holders want to prevent you from expressing an opinion on this question and to save you the trouble of writing yes or no on your ballot papers on election day, put the city to the expense of defending their action in Court of Chancery, Toronto! How considerate they are of our rights and privileges!

10. Because, if the Scripture be true, that the drunkard is excluded from the Kingdom of Heaven, this business not only keeps him, but it certainly prevents the seller from doing any genuinely religious work.

How many license-holders are regular attendants at church—are Sunday school teachers, elders, deacons, class-leaders, Y. M. C. A. workers, sick and prison visitors, etc.? By their fruits ye shall know them. Many of these men do not want their own children near their bars, or under the influence of the traffic. No class has suffered more than they by the evils of drink. We want to help them out of the business.

11. Because it is your duty to vote.

Do you only vote in a Parliamentary election when you are sure your candidate will be elected? Has there not been a loosening of drinking in the past? What caused it? The men in the business? The incident, like some of you, or, as you are fond of saying, "public opinion"? Who created public opinion? Those who never gave, spoke, or voted to hinder the traffic? Do not call us cranks and fanatics who do nothing yourself. Does it not seem sometimes, even to you, that "if these should hold their peace the very stones would cry out."

12. Because it is important in every way that you should show where you stand. You remember the Master's statement, "He that is not with me is against me." Can you be neutral on such a question? Canon Farrar says, "I feel convinced, if men, if Christians, had a heart of pity in them, have any spark of nobleness in them, they would do everything in their power to show that it is an evil that is destroying our brothers and sisters in multitudes."

They would do their best in some way or other to save the continuance of this evil in their midst." What will you do?
