Clause Nine-A Scene in the House.

LONDON, July 11.—In the House of Commons this evening discussion of clause 9 of the Home Rule Bill was continued. This clause concerns the question of Irish representation at Westminster.

Henry Seton-Karr (Conservative) moved Henry Seton-Karr (Conservative) moved that the Irish members of the Imperial Parliament be elected by the constituencies which would elect the Irish Legislative Council. Under this amendment the Irish in the House of Commons would number 48, instead of 80, as proposed by the bill.

Irish in the House of SO, as proposed by the bill.

John Morley. Chief Secretary for Ireland, replied that this proposal was based on no principle of government, and was the result of a desire merely to curtail representation in the House, and could not be accepted by the Government.

Sir Richard Temple (Con.) said 48 Irish members would be too many.

William Broderick (Con.) agreed with Sir Richard. The Irish, he said, were both impecunious and garrulous, and therein lay two reasons for reducing their representation in the House to a minimum.

Thomas Sexten (Anti-Parnellite) interrupted Mr. Broderick to say that such language was grossly impertinent and ought not to be tolerated in the House.

The Unionists shouted "Withdraw," and the Irish cheered.

Lord Randolph Churchill suggested that Mr. Sexton withdraw his words, as Mr. Broderick's were not intended for him personally.

The chairman told Mr. Sexton that he was out of order and must withdraw his expressions concerning Mr. Broderick's speech.

Mr. Sexton expressed his willingness to obey the chairman in case Mr. Broderick would first express regret for his language.

Timothy Healey (anti-Parnellite) said he regarded Mr. Sexton's attitude as quite justifiable. To call the Irish race impecunious and garrulous was to insult every Irish member who stood by his countrymen.

The Irish cheered, the Unionists shouted The Irish cheered, the Unionists shouted their protests, and for two or three min-utes the House was in an uproar. Chairman Mellar appealed to the mem-bers to support him and close the in-

Mr. Mellor sat helpless through the tumult. As the disorder abated he was agan batted by Mr. Sexton, who shouted:
"Am I to be the victim of a malicious intrusion of the clerk?" The inquiry was answered only by a renewal of the uproar, above which could be distinguished cries of "Put him out!"
Mr. Gladstone appealed to Mr. Sexton to obey the chairman.
Mr. Sexton replied with evident reluctance that he would leave his defense with the Prime Minister. Cheers and counter cheers were given when he made this statement. As he retired the Irish jumped to the benches, waved their hats and cheered inriously.
