TRAGIC STORY OF DEATH PACT GOOD CHEER FOR THE BEREAVED

That Johnstone Told to His Lawyer, S. H. Wardell.

DRAMATIC DETAILS

Claims That He and Kate Hassett Had Agreed to Commit Suicide Together in Philadelphia.

New York, Dec. 12. - The Press says: Highly dramatic in its details is the death-bed confession of Barry Johnstone, the actor who killed Kate Hassett, an actress, in Philadelphia, a week ago. Johnstone died Sunday of self-inflicted wounds. On Saturday after-noon he told the story of the murder to his counsel, Samuel H. Wardell, of this city. This confession was made public by Wardell.

It had been supposed he had planned their suicide. Now it appears she sug-gested it and many times discussed it with him. At last Johnstone decided to carry out her desire. It was for this purpose he came to this city and bought a brace of pistols. Then he returned to Philadelphia and challenged Miss Hassett to end all. She refused. He forced the revolver into her hand. She fired at him. Wounded, he killed her and then sent a bullet different sizes, from several feet long to into his own body, which finally caused death. Here is Johnstone's own statement:

"I came on to New York to open with Mansfield, but went to Phila- in the spece, inside, the smallest arti-delphia to see Miss Hassett. I went cles being placed in the toe. to her room in her boarding house on Wednesday afternoon, I said: 'I have surprised you. I want the truth.' 'She got up and called to me. said I was there to ask the truth. tried to get in the house, but was unsuccessful. I bade her good night and went away. In the evening I went to the house, but she was not in. I left a note saving I wanted to see She sent word that she would see me at 5 o'clock the next afternoon. "I did not plan to murder Kate Hassett. If she had persisted in refusing to take the revolver I should have thrown it at her feet and gone away.
"She first suggested the idea of suicide at Memphis. I had upbraided her for her extravagance.

"Then she suggested that we kill ourselves. She said we never could live apart. Afterward in Springfield, Mo. she wanted to do the same thing, asking if I did not love her enough to die with her. She took a knife and tried to kill herself. I took it away. "In New Orleans, in March, 1901, and in Niagara Falls she again asked me to commit suicide.
"She induced me to drink absinthe with her. I never had drunk it before. This was in New Orleans. I drank a great deal of it in New York and Philadelphia, before the shooting took place. "I loved the woman so much I did not want to live without her, and I purchased the pistols for the purpose of double suicide. But she was false to the tryst of death."

Johnstone, like Miss Hassett, was married. His wife for several years has been confined in a sanitarium. He left about $400 in cash, which defraved his funeral expenses.

CHRISTMAS DAY AT SANDRINGHAM

How the Taste Runs in Royal Presents.

Queen Alexandra Will Givs a Dinner to Families of Soldiers Who Fell in Africa.

London, Dec. 15.-Christmas is in the air, or, perhaps, it would be more apropos to say it is in the shop windows. The cold, dry weather has brought people up to town by the thousands and the west end shopping districts are crowded. As far as toys are concerned, France, Germany and Russia have sent us tons of ingenious knickknacks, playthings, which quite overshadow the British-trade articles The royal family holds an old-time on Christmas. Nowhere will the festive season be more thoroughly a family function than at Sandringham, where the late Queen Victoria never missed having a tree. In society circles the tall fir on the dinner table will be replaced by a neat, dwarf shrub, from the frosted branches of which will hang the most modern of packages, containing, perhaps, a diamond in one orm or another, gold thimbles, a jew eled heart or turquoise pin or earrings. NOVELTY IN DECORATION. In many country houses the outspreading fir still will reign, but this season a novelty fust introduced seems likely to gain in popularity, judging from the big sale already commanded. It is an "old woman's shoe," sold in quite small dimensions, made of any thing from silk to serge and adorned with gold, silver, bronze or tinsel. All sorts of gifts are easily stowed away

Queen Alexandra gives many photo graph frames of the most dainty and delicate description, with hand-painted mounts. Some that she has chosen this year have medallions of herself and the King upon them. One especially beautiful frame has the empire wreaths in brilliants, and the double monogram "A. Queen Alexandra intends to mark her sympathy for the suffering in the recent South African war by giv-ing a Christmas dinner to all the widows and children now in London of those who fell in the war. The dinner will be given on Dec. 27 at the Alexandra Trust Restaurant, of which the Queen is president, and which March, 1900, by Sir Thomas Lipton, for the benefit of the poor. Sir Thomas

Lipton has charge of all the arrangements for the dinner. In the proclamation announcing her Queen Alexandra will invite all the widows and children the soldiers and sailors belonging to the imperial and colonial forces who lost their lives in South Africa, or died from the effects of the campaign. She adds. "Her majesty desires, in coronation year, to express her heartfelt sympathy with those who have suffered the cruel bereavement of war, and to wish that happiness and comfort, may, with God's blessing, be theirs in the coming year."

Her majesty will defray all the traveling expenses of her guests.

STRATHROY'S WAY OF BIBLE WORK

Rev. H. McColl Describes Plans of Bible Society Branch.

To the Editor of The Advertiser. At the suggestion and request of the permanent secretary of the Western Ontario Auxiliary Bible Society, Rev. J. H. Orme, London, and with a view to give some hints that may be helpful in other places, I now venture to give a brief sketch or synopsis of the methods adopted by the Strathroy the city of London, including such Branch Bible Society. During the past able and distinguished friends of our year this branch contributed, including a legacy of $100, the sum of $325, and it was gratifying to learn that the efforts put forth had evoked the cordial appreciation of the committee of the London auxiliary. We have what may be called an annual campaign extending over about three months. Early in July we begin by having a meeting of committee, which is almost always well attended, and at which the year's work is all considered and laid out. Arrangements are made to interview the ladies appointed at the previous annual meetng to act as collectors, and secure their consent, in order to avoid any possible disappointment or friction. Nearly all the collectors continue to act from year to year, and, indeed, become increasingly earnest and efficient; but when vacancies occur we find no difficulty in filling them. For collecting purposes the town is divided into ten districts, for each of which two collectors are appointed. For many years we have had what may be called a "social gathering" of the committee and collectors. This is held in some residence as more suitable to its object and conducive to its success, and some of the best homes in our town have been cheerfully opened for the purpose. There is Scripture reading, prayer, singing, sometimes reading of a suitable character, short addresses and a free interchange of views and sentiments. We have found these meetings very helpful, especially to the collectors, and the last for 1902, held Aug. 27, was more largely attended and felt to be more profitable than ever before. There were two new features which, no doubt, contributed to this result; all friends with the society's work were submitted for brief discussion. The time for the annual canvass for contributions for many years has been from Sept. 1 to Oct. 10. For several reasons we have found this the best time, and the collectors are supplied with collecting books by the secretary in due season.

of the Bible cause were invited to attend, and special topics connected

We make it a point to distribute large quantity of literature (which is supplied for us by the London auxiliary), the last Sunday in August or first in September. Brief tracts leaflets, stating concisely the claims of the Bible Society, have been found more effective and more likely to be read than large pamphlets. They are distributed in the churches, by the janitors, as the people pass out, and the method has been found quite satisfactory. All collectors, the committee, and all who contribute $1 or upwards are supplied reguarly from month to month with the "Bible Society Reporter," which is sent to us in the same way as the literature. The same Sunday, just before the collec-tors are supposed to begin their canvass, the ministers of the several evangelical denominations always cheerfully respond to the request to advocate the claims of the society from their pulpits in any way they consider hest

We also take advantage of the kindness of our local press in granting the free use of their columns, more pecially about the time the ladies are ommencing their canvass. It can easily be understood that by all these means the people become well informed, they understand the nature and claims of the Bible cause. and are better prepared to treat the collectors kindly and liberally. In many cases the failure to give arises from stinginess.

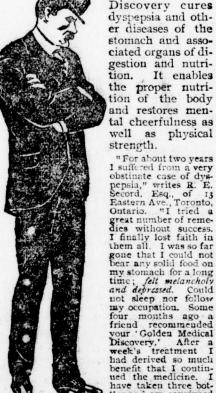

For some years we have looked after some outside points in the neighboring townships of Adelaide and doc, and at five different churches. varying in distance from three to six miles, we have what may almost be called sub-branches Some time during the month of August, by arrangement with the pastors, and with their co-operation, meetings are appointed and held, to which we send speakers, and at which collectors are appointed in the several localities. From these outside points we received in 1902 over $46 in contributions Arrangements are made in good

This meeting is always held on Thursday evening, as this is prayer meeting night, and it is given up, thus securing a large attendance. Many years ago when depending on the visit of an agent, the meetings were a succession of failures, but a new plan was adopted, by which the committee took the entire management into their own hands. Instead waiting for an agent, they fix the place and date, arrange the programme, and secure the speakers. Besides music and the reading and adoption of the annual report, we have two speakers, one a local clergyman, usually the latest ministerial arrival, and the other some good speakers from a distance. For the latter we have, for many years, drawn heavily upon society as his Lordship Bishop Baldwin, Revs. Dr. Antliff, Dr. Smith, Dr. Sowerby, Dr. Johnston, W. J. Clark, Canon Dann, Canon Richardson, Geo. J. Bishop and others. These meetings are always well attended, and the proceedings, including the address, most interesting and instructive. This is the closing meeting of our cam-Briefly we keep in view united effort, mutual co-operation, business methods, the education of the people into an intelligent understanding of the claims of the Bible cause, and the duty and privilege of cheerful giving, and above all, the Divine blessing-all the results are well expressed in the following paragraph in the annual report for 1902: "The present season's campaign has again shown very emphatically that the cause has the abiding sympathy of our community, and the effort is becoming increasing-called on, and hence, not only have the financial results been highly satisfactory, but even more gratifying has been the cheerful giving, and the hearty mutual co-operation.' It may be added that all the work done here for the society is purely voluntary and gratuitous. By subdivision and individual effort it is not found at all burdensome, and even the committee are not asked to meet except two or three times during our campaign, neither does it in any degree interfere with contributions to other objects. This brief sketch is not published for advertising purposes, but solely to help the Bible cause, and while the methods adopted here may not all be possible or applicable in other places, it is hoped some of the hints given may be useful and stim-to year. The committee, collectors, contributors, the clergy, the local

Detroit, Mich., Dec. 15 .- Gen. Rusell A. Galesburg, Mich., Dec. 15 .- The luxuriant hair that has been the pride from want of knowledge rather than of Mrs. Alexander Dowey for many years brought disaster to that lady at her home in this village recently. Mrs. Dowey was preparing to attend an entertainment at the home of an acquaintance and was nearly ready, only awaiting the return of her hus band, who was to accompany her. when she opened a closet door and the family cat, that had accidentally been shut therein, sprang from an upper shelf and happened to alight upon her head. In some way, the animal's claws became entangled in Mrs. Dowey's hair and its frantic efforts for release only served to entangle it more thoroughly in the meshes. Upon Mr. Dowey's return he found his wife unconscious upon the floor,

About 200 Objects of From 1.500 to 7.600 Years, With Some of Prehistoric

The first large collection of Egyptian relics to reach Canada has just been unpacked and classified by Mr. Edward Burwash at Victoria College, Toronto. It will form a most valuable addition to the already interesting assortment of curios there. and has already added force to the suggestion that a museum should be built in connection with the university. In this last addition there are about 200 articles, and almost every one represents some individual phase of the civilization of the people who lived in Egypt from the time of Christ and a little later back to 5,-000 years B. C., and even to prehistoric ages. The relics were unearthed through the agency of the Egyptian Exploration Fund of London, under, the direction of Prof. Flinders I'ct rie. It is due to good fortune that Victoria College has been able to procure them for ever since the excavating began the Egyptian Government has maintained a strict censorship, setting aside for their own museum such specimens as they may from time to time desire. The objects that the censor permits to leave the country are taken to England, where the British Museum has first choice. Now, however, that museum is pretty well supplied, and one-half of what it does not reserve is distributed amongst other British institutions and the other half comes to America. Heretofore the collections that have crossed the Atlantic have gone to the United States. But last year Mr. C. T. Currelly of Victoria College, who is now in Egypt, inducing the authorities to give this last collection to a Canadian institution. All that the college has had to do in the matter is to pay for transportation and to agree to exhibit the collection at the annual conversaz-The collection comprises specimens of pottery, glassware, earthenware, wood-carving, embalming, toilet articles, coins and bronze ornaments. There are earthen pots 7,000 years old, of graceful design and clever workmanship. They are hand-made, as tne potter's weel was then unknown Most of them have round bottoms, showing that they were intended to be placed in the earth, probably to contain water and to keep it cool. One, a particularly good specimen of the Roman amphera, was found in a cellar and was full of coins, a number of which accompanied it. The rope with which it had been tied is still there and in remarkably good condition. The coins are Greek and Roman, and some of them bear the features and the name of Tiberius Caesar. They are the same as the coins over which Christ said, "Render unto Caesar, etc." There is one fine sample of the Egyptian blue glaze, the secret of which has never since been discovered. It decorates a ushafti, a small figure that the ancients used to bury with their dead. There are a number of lamps of the same sort as those referred to They are quite small and would hold enough oilve oil to burn about half an hour. Some of them are carved and have the maker's stamp on the bottom. They might be compared to a diminutive tea pot with a short, straight spout, which served as a support for the wick

One of the most interesting articles is a Ptolmaic alabaster box, doubtless of the same sort as that which contained the precious ointment with which Mary anointed Christ. It is about five inches long and shaped very much like a fancy pointed bottle for holding smelling salts. The workmanship is exquisite. A tinted glass vase of Roman make is of much interest and might offer some suggestions to Tiffany. Around its neck coils a light greenish snake. A Roman lady's jewel box 2,500 years old is interesting. It is of crudely caryed wood and contains glass and amber beads and a Greek coin. Owing to decay good specimens of ancient Egyptian, wood-carving are not plentiful. This collection contains a partly-decayed piece of wood in the shape of a crocodile, and there are parts of several pieces of furniture. The ancient Egyptians largely wor-shiped animals, and an example of this is shown in a mummified crocodile. It is encased in bands of linen and canvas, resembling modern weaving, and the bands were placed doubtless with great care, forming small squares.

A number of objects in the collection have religious significance. There is a part of the judgment scene from the Book of the Dead. It is a stone slab taken from one of the Egyptian temples, and carved thereon are representations of a spirit about to be judged and an attendant. There are also the head piece and the breast piece of the cartilage of an Egyptian mummy. They are decorated in colors well preserved, and the face looks as if covered with gold leaf. On both are various religious symbols. There is also a wreath of flowers taken from the head of a mummy said to be 2,000 years old. There are as well crude flint heads of prehistoric ages, curry combs, spindle knobs. marbles, bronze statuettes, bronze bracelets, bells, vases, mace heads. ivory needles, ivory ornaments, a crude painting on wood, and many other articles that might give an insight into the domestic and religious condition of the ancient Egyptians. The collection will prove of great interest and value to students of theology and others.

Artificial Stone Sidewalks.

It has been settled beyond dispute that an artificail stone sidewalk will outlast one of wood by fifteen years and one of brick by eight or ten years. They are smooth and firm, cost little or nothing for repairs, and, though the first cost is greater, it is a matter of economy to lay sidewalks.
