

SULPHUR IS BEST TO CLEAR UP UGLY, BLEMISHED SKIN

Any breaking out or skin irritation on face, neck or body is overcome quickest by applying Mentho-Sulphur, says a noted skin specialist. Because of its germ destroying properties, nothing has ever been found to take the place of this sulphur preparation that instantly brings ease from the itching, burning and irritation. Mentho-Sulphur heals eczema right up, leaving the skin clear and smooth. It seldom fails to relieve the torment or disfigurement. A little jar of Rowles Mentho-Sulphur may be obtained at any drug store. It is used like cold cream.—Adv.

A STORY OF COURAGE.
By ELENORE MEHER, N.

CHAPTER LXXVI. Petra's Visit.

"Hello, there, Diddle!" The gay voice brought an image of the bright, saucy face, the hair that Denny loved to feel, soft, perfumed, against his chin. "Come and sip tea with me, lad, at 4:30 in our salon."

"Can't make it that early."

"Oh, but this is important."

"Will a little later do?" Denny sought a tone midway between business and banter. He didn't wish Joan to guess that he was talking to a girl—to Petra.

And Joan was filing letters at a desk two feet from him, her profile toward him. He could see the black lashes, straight and very long, against her cheek. She appeared deaf and absorbed.

"Will 5 o'clock do?"

Back came the high, petulant treble distinctly audible two or three feet from the receiver: "What's the matter, Diddle? Have you a cold? Or are you short on words today? And haven't I a name?"

Denny laughed in a hurried, self-conscious manner, repeating: "Well, now! How's 5 o'clock?"

As he hung up he stole a covert glance at Joan, thought he saw a faint smile on the curved lips. It left an irritation on his thoughts. He turned to the plans he was making, studying them long and quietly. What made Joan smile like that? Was she smiling? Would she grow distant and quiet now? Faded out of the picture in that way she had? He was impelled to speak to her, to show her some favor.

She was standing at the cabinet. Even in her quiet there was an eagerness, a swift grace in the long, slim lines of her figure. It was pleasant having Joan there. She handled a mass of difficult work—typing contracts, endless specifications, reports to the irrigation district—without apparent effort, all the while giving the impression of being on a holiday.

Often he had come in to the office to find her leaning back, her hands clasped behind her head, whistling softly, dreams in her eyes. Something about her then—a fugitive loneliness touched him deeply. He associated her always with that forsaken cottage in West Oakland with the marigolds blooming in the vacant room. The feeling recurred now, for Joan wore one of the flaming orange things pinned to her coat.

"Say, Joan, you like marigolds?"

She turned, she glanced at the gaudy flower. She was smiling. He could see it plainly now. "Apropos of what, sir?"

"Well, you're wearing one. They become you."

"Yes—there's an affinity between us. We're both poor and proud. Like to see something?" She came over with her naive candor. "Isn't he a love?"

A picture of a youngster of eight or ten—freckles, too big teeth showing in a grin, hands in his pockets—kid like Denny himself was yesterday. Joan's face glowed. "And read this, Denman." She brought out a wrinkled bit of scratch paper with letters sloping backwards and forwards and scrawled all over the sheet.

"Dear Old Jo:

"You're a brick. Can't think how ever so long. Gosh, this is a beauty and say, what do you think I beat all the other fellows bustin' windows in Flaherty's house. And I don't know what's gonna happen fer I never got a wish before. They're down to their grandmother's ranch course it don't make no difference to them. But I wouldn't say nuthin' about it to ma cause the fellers might catch it and yer know ma's still got all them queer ideas of hers. She ain't like in, Jo. Gosh, why don't yer come home. Mary thinks she's an awful lot. She gives me a terrible pain. I got poor in department and spellin' and grammar, but my polywogs lived and all the other kids' are dead and I got five frogs now and ten warts and I stole a piece of beefsteak and buried it so I guess get rid of the warts and I beat all the other fellers counting humps and touching humpbacks, and one of them gimme a crack in the eye but that was after I touched the hump so it didn't hurt me none. Well, I guess I've told you all the news except that there was a fire on our

"I heard of many people who had recommended your Heart and Nerve Pills, so I decided to give them a trial. After I had used two boxes I found they had done me good, and after having taken five boxes I was completely relieved."

"I cannot recommend your Pills enough, and I would advise anyone having a weak heart or troubled with nervousness to use them."

IF RHEUMATIC BEGIN ON SALTS

Says We Must Keep Feet Dry,
Avoid Exposure, Eat
No Sweets.

Stay off the damp ground, avoid exposure, keep feet dry, eat no sweets of any kind for a while, drink lots of water and above all take a spoonful of Jad Salts occasionally to help keep down uric and toxic acids.

Rheumatism is caused by poison toxins, uric acids, which are generated in the bowels and absorbed into the blood. It is the function of the kidneys to filter this acid from the blood and cast it out in the urine. The pores of the skin also serve as a means of freeing the blood of this impurity. In damp and chilly, cold weather the skin pores are closed, thus forcing the kidneys to do double work; they become weak and sluggish and fail to eliminate this poison, which keeps accumulating and circulating through the system, eventually settling in the joints and muscles, causing stiffness, soreness and pain, called rheumatism.

At the first twinge of rheumatism get from any pharmacy about four ounces of Jad Salts; put a tablespoonful in a glass of water and drink before breakfast each morning for a week. This is helpful to neutralize acidity, remove body waste also to stimulate the kidneys, thus helping to rid the blood of these rheumatic poisons.

Jad Salts is inexpensive, and is made from the acid of grapes and lemon juice, combined with lithia, and is used with excellent results by thousands of folks who are subject to rheumatism.—Adv.

roof and Mrs. Wilcox dropped down dead. Dead as she could be and stayed there two days before they ketcher her in the kitchen with the door locked. And so I thank you again, Jo, and send you my picture and wish to goodness you'd think to come home. Your effekshun brother, "BURKE LEWIS."

Denny got half way through. He burst out laughing, remembering the frantic, appealing letters he had sent to Sid. "Gee—the poor kid!"

"That's what I think, Denny. Little kid like that and never gets a thing he wants. Mother said I should have sent a sweater or stockings. Would you?"

"I should say not! Not much! Suppose a kid does bust a few windows? What made you think of the gun, Joan?"

"Why in every letter he's talked of one. I knew he wanted it. And I think it's terrible for youngsters to be long and long and never get the least thing they ask for. Don't you? You know once when I was about twelve I saved up $3.10 and it was to buy a toy grocery store. The price was $4. Then, one day my mother came and asked me for the little bank because she had to have the money. I had to hand it over. She laughed, a catch in her voice. 'I could sit down and cry over that yet. I never got the grocery store and I never got the money back. It's been the saddest day of my life.'"

Joan laughed, a catch in her voice. "I could sit down and cry over that yet. I never got the grocery store and I never got the money back. It's been the saddest day of my life."

Denny's chin set. He looked as much like a scragging youngster as the snapshot on the table. "You bet! So do I, Joan. And I had $2 once and a big brute grabbed me by the ear and knocked it out of me. He was talking through his teeth, more furious than the day he had shaken his fists after Matt Borley's hulking form."

Joan dashed her hand across her eyes. "Aren't we a pair of fools, Denny?"

He grinned, boyishly, shoved the drawing on his desk toward her. "There's the way the dam will look when it's finished. Joan, remember the day you said an engineer had a chance to be a missionary?"

"Why, flying the sins of my youth in my coat, what makes you think of missionaries?"

"This job. It's like that. The more I work on it the deeper it gets me. Look, we've decided, 'The same old thing can be done all over the state.'"

Joan watched his eyes growing vehement. The smile deepened on her lips, an exultant pride drawing the corner of her cheeks. She thought: "Yes! Talk Denman Brooks. Give me your thought. More, more. Let me listen. How magnificent you are!"

Denny went out with a light heart. "Guess it's a day, Joan. Why don't you quit, now?" The swag was in his mind. Nice talking to Joan. How quickly she grasped what he had to say. Nice to hear her answer: "You'll do it. You'll do it. Just as though he were a god. She expected him to achieve as greatly as he killed. He would, too. She made him feel like that."

Joan picked up the plans, sorted them as though they were living things. Someone was coming in. Steps toward her, then a startled, "Oh! Oh, Miss Lewis!"

The papers fluttered as though a breeze wished them. Joan knew her face was absurdly crimson, but she turned quietly. "How do you do, Miss Channing?"

Petra's dimples vanished. The black brows were arched. "Oh, very well, thank you. Mr. Brooks isn't gone?"

"Why, it's only half-past four. Isn't he coming back?"

"I think not."

"I think I'll wait a few moments."

She sauntered over to Denny's chair, toyed with the paper cutter. Then she asked sweetly, "Do you like working here, Miss Lewis?"

"Very much. The work is fascinating. Would you like to see this photograph of the canyon where the dam is to be?" Joan took over the picture. "See, they've drawn in the site of the power house."

Petra glanced at it. "I've heard nothing but that dam and power house for the last three months. Joan argued so much before I agreed to have him take it."

Joan felt as though she were slapped and told to sit quiet and hold her tongue for the rest of the day. "It's all Greek to me, but I suppose you've been working so long at it that you get something out of it."

"Just a month," Joan offered guiltlessly. "I never was in an engineer's office before."

"Oh, so? It's pleasant here, isn't it? You and Mr. Brooks are such old friends, I believe." Petra smiled, but her eyes took in every look of Joan's face. They drew back a little from the steady glance.

Joan picked up the photograph. "Yes, we are friends."

"And he has such a brilliant idea, hasn't he? I suppose you've noticed that?"

Joan laughed. "Oh, yes! Hasn't he?" She wouldn't follow Petra's lead.

"Well, I suppose you're gone for good after I go and think up this lovely surprise. That's the way with a man and they tell us we are illogical." She got up slowly. "It's been awfully pleasant meeting Miss Lewis. I don't know why he needed to leave so early."

She kept toying with the paper cutter, talking on and on.

Suddenly Joan was aware of the door opening. Denny standing flushed and self-conscious, then rushing over with a shriek: "Well, here's luck. Come for me, Petra!"

GALLOWES PREPARED REPRIEVE GRANTED

Hangman Arrives At Sandwich
To Find Sentence Commuted To Life.

Special to The Advertiser.

Windsor, Jan. 21.—While Hangman Arthur Ellis was preparing the gallows this afternoon at the Essex county jail, Sandwich, John Koltan, slayer of Peter Starchuck, his partner on a farm at Petite Cote, was reprieved, the death sentence being commuted to life imprisonment. The gallows, which have not been used for 24 years, were being erected on the west side of the jail.

The executioner, who came to the border Sunday, is a slight man with a very determined-looking chin. He doesn't relish the job of sending fellow beings into eternity, but he said that someone must do the "ugly work."

Koltan slew Starchuck during a moonshine orgy, using an axe and a maul, both of which were produced in court during the trial in December. William Wanless, governor at the jail, believes that public opinion in Essex county is almost a unit in opposition to the death penalty for murder. Although there have been no fewer than twenty murders in the past 24 years, there was not been a single execution, all of the condemned persons being reprieved.

CHURCH UNION IN CANADA

Unionist "Facts" Explained in Full from Basis of Union

The Unionists tell us that:—"Throughout the English-speaking world there is evidence of a drawing together of the Christian Churches and of a growing confidence in the desirability of Church Union."

THE ANSWER:—It is true there is a growing spirit of Christian Unity throughout the English-speaking world, UNITY.—But the Organic Union movement is dead or dying in the United States, and has recently been abandoned in Australia, and there is nothing like it in any other country.

The Unionists tell us that:—"Canada is giving leadership, because our needs forced definite action."

THE ANSWER:—Canada is being driven, through poor leadership, where others are too wise to go.

The Unionists tell us that:—"Parliamentary approval . . . is designed to protect the rights of both Unionists and minorities."

THE ANSWER:—More accurately it should be stated that Parliamentary approval is necessary to legalize the taking of the property and identity of the Presbyterian Church by a minority of that Church into the so-called Union Church of Canada.

The Unionists' So-called Facts Are:

1. "Before a minister can be ordained, he must 'satisfy the examining body' that he is in essential agreement with 'The Statement of Doctrine' of the United Church."

THE REAL FACTS ARE:—That the Minister need not be so thoroughly in earnest about his "essential agreement" as to back it up with his signature, neither is he asked even to promise adherence by word of mouth. He makes no pledge whatsoever to teach even the Doctrines of the proposed Basis. He is only required to satisfy a so-called "Examining Body" composed of men who themselves have taken no pledge to teach the proposed Basis, and whose examination, therefore, may be expected to be a very cursory affair.

2. "The oversight of the Spiritual interests of each charge shall be entrusted to the Minister or Ministers and a body of men specially chosen or 'set apart' or ordained for that work, who shall jointly constitute the Session."

THE REAL FACTS ARE:—They do not tell you that the men so set apart will be Elders in name only. The Session will no longer be a Court of the Church nor will the Elders any longer have the RIGHT, BUT ONLY THE POSSIBILITY of sitting in Presbytery, for the Presbytery Member may be "anyone on the roll of the Congregation." THE ORDAINED ELDER as known to Presbyterians today, is shorn of its meaning.

3. "Any pastoral charge, in view of a vacancy, MAY extend a call to any properly qualified 'Minister or Ministers' subject to the approval of the SETTLEMENT COMMITTEE, as now to Presbytery, etc."

THE REAL FACTS ARE:—In the Presbyterian Church there is no MAY EXTEND A CALL. The Call is an INDEFESIBLE RIGHT, fought for and won, and now to be changed from a RIGHT to a concession.

THE SETTLEMENT COMMITTEE is supreme and its actions cannot be overturned by any court. It consults the people's desire ONLY so far as it shall see fit, and reports "for information only." Its authority is far above that of the Presbytery at present. The Presbytery is responsible to higher courts, the Settlement Committee is not. The Presbytery's sole consideration is the character and standing of the person called; but the Settlement Committee has power to refuse to allow a man to go to a Congregation that wants him, on the ground that they desire to put him else where.

The Call as a Right of the People Disappears

4. "It shall be the duty of the Presbytery to induct or install Ministers . . . to inquire each year into the personal character, doctrinal beliefs and general fitness of candidates for the ministry . . . to license them to preach and to recommend for the ordination of the Conference."

THE REAL FACTS ARE:—as we say, that the Presbytery can do many things, but it CANNOT ORDAIN, and yet the right of the Presbytery to ordain is one of the foundations of Presbyterianism.

THE UNIONISTS STATE: What we are asked to give up is nothing compared to the potential value of the proposed Union, and yet the Unionists will spend thousands of the Churches' money to make you believe you are giving up nothing at all.

(Moffats Open Element)

(Moffats Covered Element)

YOU can have either open type or covered type elements on your Moffat Electric Range. The advantages of the open type element, however, are so overwhelming that we unhesitatingly recommend every purchaser to select the Moffat open type.

In our electrical laboratories we have tested out the efficiency of Open and Covered types of elements or "burners" time and again for many years. The superiority of the Moffat Open Type over every Covered Type element produced is more marked today than ever before.

SPEED in cooking is the very first thing a woman demands of her kitchen range and the Moffat Open Type element is

The Fastest Heating Element Made

Speed? Snap the switch. Instantly the Moffat Open Type element begins to heat. Almost before you realize it the element is a glowing circle of red heat.

Study the illustration of the open type element above. See how the element (wires) are coiled in the grooves. Note the little projections (Moffats patent) which prevent the element from lying in the bottom of the grooves, holding it up so that air can circulate around it. Air circulating around the coils allows them to heat very much faster. The heat is evenly distributed and goes direct to the utensil.

The element plate is made of high-quality, heat-resisting porcelain. Ordinary kitchen wear and tear can cause it no harm.

Moffats open type elements are built to last for many years. Replacements are exceedingly rare. They don't "peter out" like electric light bulbs, or weaken under steady usage.

They have a record of continuous use for seven years and longer, and are easily removed when renewals are necessary.

Boiling Over Cannot Harm Open Element

Any Moffat dealer will demonstrate to you that the boiling over of food cannot harm a Moffat Open Type element. Let the element become red hot. Pour on water. No harm done. Little holes in the plate allow the water to run through to the removable drip tray below. In a moment or two the coils are glowing as hot as ever, none the worse.

The patented oven elements of a Moffat Range are equally efficient in their work. These elements hold a record of extraordinary durability and never give trouble. Their efficiency is largely responsible for the unusual baking and roasting qualities of the much-coveted Moffat oven.

E-30.D.

Important Features

The "Electra" Porcelain enameling on Moffats Ranges is glassy-smooth and durable. It cleans in a jiffy. On each oven door is a mercury thermometer. Outside terminals within porcelain covers result in no trouble from wire breakages. Switches turn either way; allow no leakage of current; each switch with its burner is clearly marked.
